

Bary Literature.

Ike read, "At Paris, the dressmakers jewellers, and milliners have all been occupied in furnishing the trousseau of the Princess Wassa."

"Stop, Isaac," said Mrs. Partington, raising her fingers, and glancing at him over the top of her spectacles; "is that so?"

He assured her that it was. "Well," continued she, and a blush of offended modesty crossed her features, like the sun-flush on the newly reddened barn-door; "that may be the way they do things in Paris, but it isn't modest to begin with."

A woman has no right to wear 'em for? She can't wear but one pair to a time, and here she has got all of the dressmakers making trousers for her, as if she was going to live long enough to wear 'em out. Ah, women a'n't what they were once!"

She rose suddenly as she spoke, and Ike, who was upon the back of her chair, endeavoring to tie a string to a nail in the big beam that traversed the ceiling, was thrown violently against the table, breaking three plates and a teacup in his descent.

WILKES never lost his presence of mind, but was always full of resources. When he was apprehended by one of the king's messengers, the warrant included Churchill, the poet, who entered the room just as Wilkes was captured. "Thompson my dear fellow," cried Wilkes, as if overjoyed to see him, "they have seized me, and the warrant includes Churchill. You are not likely to see Churchill yourself, but if you meet any of his friends, beg them to warn him to get out of the way."

Churchill took the hint; and, after a few observations about Mrs. Thompson, he left the room, and took care to be off pretty quickly when he was clear of the house.

FEMALE LOGIC.—As a young woman was walking alone one evening, a man looked at her, and followed her. The young woman said, "Why do you follow me?"—He answered, "Because I have fallen in love with you."—The woman said, "Why are you in love with me?" My sister is much handsomer. She is coming after me; go and make love to her."—The man turned back and saw a woman with an ugly face; being greatly displeased he turned to the first woman and said, "Why did you tell me a falsehood?"—The woman answered, "Neither did you speak the truth: for if you were really in love with me, why did you leave me to look upon my sister?"

DEACON SNARE, in exhortation, would often allude to the "place where prayer is wanted" to be made.

"Ah!" said Mrs. Partington to herself, "there's nothing like humility in a Christian. I'm glad you confess it. I don't know a place under the canister of heaven where prayer is wanted more to be made than here, and I hope you'll be forgiven for the rancorous butter you sold me yesterday."

She was a simple-minded woman, was Mrs. P., and was apt to get the world mixed up with her devotion; believing, somehow, that Christian duty prescribed worldly justice. She hadn't been long a member.

A DOUBTFUL COMPLIMENT.—A young lady in company with a right reverend prelate consented, after a long and coy resistance, to be led to the piano. She played and sang so badly, that the auditors hesitated to express their thanks. In this strait his lordship arose, and crossing the room said, with his sweetest smile, "Thank you, Miss—, very particularly. Another time, when you say you can't sing, we shall all know how to believe you."

I pressed her gentle form to me, and whispered in her ear, if, when I was far away, for me she'd shed a tear I paused for some cheering words my throbbing heart to cool, and with her rosy lips she said, "Oh Bill, you're such a fool."

WANTED.—A reward of £5 is offered for the apprehension of Patrick O'Flaherty, who last week stole the jackass, which same had on a pair of corduroy breeches, with blue eyes, and smokes a short pipe; much given to squinting, and likewise his snags are down at heel.—Irish paper.

Too HAPPY.—A newly-married man down east says if he had an inch more of happiness he could not possibly live. His wife is obliged to roll him on the floor and pat him with a brick-bat every day to keep him from being too happy.—American paper.

REMARKABLE FISHING.—All Angles who delight in angling will read with great interest the following accounts of Irish Fishing: "In dragging a pond a formidable pike was landed measuring nearly eight feet in length; some others were likewise taken possession of—by the Police."

A providence boy, five years of age, having stolen a can of milk his mother took him to task with moral suasion, and wound up her discourse by exclaiming: "What in the world was you going to do with the milk any how?" I was going to steal a little dog to drink it," was the crushing reply.

BY A MONEY-LENDER.—If "distance lends enchantment to the view," what interest per annum does it charge for the accommodation?"

"I AM about to do for you what the Evil One never did by," said a quaint parson in his "valedictory" to his flock, "that is, I shall leave you."

ARITHMETIC.—An honest Hibernian in a company, who blamed the clergy for taking the tenth part of the people's property, exclaimed, "Aye! they would take a twentieth if they could."

Mrs. Partington says she don't see why people want to be always struggling for wealth; for her part, she affirms that all she wants is food and raiment and clothes to wear to meeting.

A house is no home unless it can contain food and fire for the mind as well as the body.

Agricultural.

We copy the following from the Wisconsin Farmer, and we would recommend farmers to give it a careful perusal, as it is very applicable to a great many on this Island:—

I noticed a piece in your paper, of May 18th, entitled, "A plea in behalf of shiftless farmers," in which it attempts to excuse the delapidated appearance of the farms "Out West."

I acknowledge it to be a fact, in some cases that this shiftlessness is caused by uncontrollable circumstances, but I do not say that because a man is poor he need not let his farm utensils, that he has worked hard to get, lie where he last used them, exposed to sun and rain, and wasting fifty per cent on their cost every year. You may pass by a great many farms owned by well-to-do farmers, and see here a plough thrown out by the side of the fence to rust; there a reaper, left where it was last used in harvest; timber rotting and getting otherwise damaged.

Just take a look into their barnyard, and there you will find old broken reapers, ploughs, waggons, harrows, sowing machines, fanning mills, etc., lying around in all directions, with cattle, sheep, hogs and colts running over them, and smashing them up generally.

There are also boards enough lying around to make a good shed to keep these things in, and a few days' work suffice to build a good, snug, handy place where he can put away every tool in order, ready for the next year's work. And by so doing, save all the expense of repairing machines, and the perplexity of scouring ploughs, etc., every time one wants to use them. I say all the expense—for I believe there are five dollars paid for repairs from laying out in the weather, where one is paid for actual wear. Take, for instance, a good reaper. If properly worked and taken care of, only running from ten to twenty days in a harvest, what is there to hinder it to last from ten to twenty years, instead of only from four to eight, as is now the case with a great many?

What man is there among us that cannot better afford to pay twenty dollars for lumber than to pay thirty for repairs? When will farmers that are continually talking about being poor take care of what they have got, and then try to get more? I wish they would remember the old adage, "A penny saved is worth two earned."

ABOUT PLOUGHS.—It is frequently the case that a farmer will buy two ploughs of the same make and pattern, and one will prove to be a much easier running and holding plough than the other. Why? It may be that the castings are warped and do not fit together well; but far more generally, because the iron in the two mouldboards is not of the same temper—the plough with the softest mouldboard being the poorest of the two. The furrow adhering more closely to the soft mouldboard, makes the draft of the plough heavier, and likewise pulls the plough around to the right, away from the land therefore making it run unsteady. As an illustration take two pleasure sleighs, the one having on hard cast shoes and the other soft cast shoes. When these two sleighs run over a piece of bare ground, the one with soft shoes draws very much the hardest, and has the most side draft. It is quite difficult for furnace-men to make their mouldboards always of the same proper temper, and especially is it so where they melt soft machinery iron at the same heat with hard plough iron. As a general rule the best and most uniform ploughs come from those firms who make that particular tool a speciality and a study. Their mechanics become familiar with selecting and melting iron for that purpose, and their castings are apt to be fitted together with extra care.—Northern Farmer.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's. PREPARATIONS FOR THE HAIR.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer

is suited to both young and old. It strengthens the Hair, prevents its falling or turning grey, and imparts to it a beautiful glossy appearance. It never fails to RESTORE GREY HAIR TO ITS ORIGINAL YOUTHFUL COLOR.

IT IS NOT A DYE, but acts directly upon the roots of the Hair, giving them the natural nourishment required, producing the same vitality and luxuriant quantity as in youth. It will restore it on bald places, requires no previous preparation of the hair, and is easily applied by one's self. One bottle will usually last for a year, as after the hair is once restored, occasional applications once in three months will insure against grey hairs to the most advanced age.

The Restorer Reproduces and the Hair Dressing Cultivates and Beautifies. Principal Sales Office, 198 Greenwich Street, New York City. August 1, 1867.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Dressing, or ZYLOBAISAMUM, is essential to use with the Restorer, but the Hair Dressing alone often restores, and never fails to invigorate, beautify and refresh the Hair, rendering it soft, silky and glossy, and disposing it to remain in any desired position.

FOR LADIES AND CHILDREN, whose hair requires frequent dressing, it has no equal. No lady's toilet is complete without it. The rich glossy appearance imparted is truly wonderful. It cleanses the Hair, removes all dandruff, and imparts to it a most delightful fragrance. It will prevent the Hair from falling out, and is the most economical and valuable Hair Dressing known. Millions of bottles sold every year.

The Restorer Reproduces and the Hair Dressing Cultivates and Beautifies. Principal Sales Office, 198 Greenwich Street, New York City. August 1, 1867.
