

Joe Bonanno Name Crops Up In Doiron Probe Evidence

By RONALD LEBEL
OTTAWA (CP)—The name of Joe Bonanno, a prominent American gangster, was mentioned in a report by a doorman who was head of a Mafia family kept popping up at the Doiron judicial inquiry here.

Raymond Daoust, a prominent Montreal criminal lawyer, testified he represented Bonanno as well as narcotics suspect Lucier Rivard last summer.

Pierre Lamontagne, another Montreal lawyer, testified last week he opposed Mr Daoust in both the Bonanno and Rivard cases.

Bonanno turned up in Montreal last May after entering Canada from the United States. He said he could not discuss the Bonanno case in detail because of professional secrecy, but the facts would fill a novel, says a businessman and applied for Canadian citizenship.

He was jailed shortly after charged with perjury for falsely claiming in his citizenship application he had no criminal record.

Mr. Daoust testified Tuesday he worked day and night through the worst weather of June and July, trying every legal procedure to free Bonanno.

named Lamontagne, another Montreal lawyer, had been present as well.

Two days later Bonanno left Canada voluntarily and dropped his application for Canadian citizenship.

Mr. Daoust did not explain Mr. Rivard's interest in the Bonanno case and the 19 lawyers at the inquiry did not question him on this point.

Mr. Rivard, MP for Montreal, said he had made representations for Rivard's release and announced his resignation as Mr. Pearson's parliamentary secretary.
