A Farmer's View of Preaching.

(Omaha World.)
Well, wife, town sermons, seems to me,
Are like the ridin' plough;
They're easy, purty kind of things,
But don't go deep, somehow.
They take ye over lots o' ground,
An' science styles it such,
Both in the sermon an' the plough,
That one don't feel it much.

To-day our preacher skinned along,
An' peared to do a heap,
A cuttin' kivrins' of the weeds
He oughter ploughed in deep;
An' when he halted at the end,
An' got his team ungeared,
The devil laffed to see the tars
A-growin', I'm afeard.

This scientific ploughin' now
An' science preachin', too,
Both run too shaller for the work,
The pint has got to do.
Ye've got to let the traces out,
An' change the clevis pin,
Then hit the handles, hold 'n' tight,
An' let the pint go in.

THE TEA TABLE.
A Collection of Interesting Items for Dessert.

Now it is being argued that the moon influences drunkenness as it does the tides. Those who talk in this strain say that it has been remarked for years that drunkenness prevails to a greater extent from the first quarter to the full of the moon than at other times. In other words, while the moon is getting full the tipplers imitate their example.

It may be interesting to the devotees of cricket in Charlottetown to know that Mr. W. G. Grace, of England, has the best record of any player that ever lived. He has made over 50,000 runs, which means that he has run over 600 miles of ground to obtain these runs. He has made 100 runs in an inning more than 180 times, 200 runs twelve times, 300 runs thrice and once he made 400.

There are few people who understand the common rule of measurement in purchasing wearing apparel. For instance, a man will buy a coat that is a "size" too small or too large. A "size" smaller or a "size" larger is what he probably needs, but he does not know what a "size" is. Well a size in a coat is one inch, a size in underwear is two inches, a size in a sock is one inch, in a shirt one-half an inch, in shoes one-sixth of an inch, pants one inch, gloves one-fourth of an inch, and in hats one-eighth of an inch.

The "forget-me-not" has a rather romantic story connected with the origin of its name, which will bear relation in this column. A young couple who were soon to be married, while walking along the banks of the Danube river, saw one of these flowers floating on its bosom. The affianced bride admired it, and fearing it would be carried away, regretted its fatal destiny. The lover immediately plunged into the water, where he had no sooner seized the flower than he sank in the flood. Making a final effort, he threw the blossom upon the bank, and at the moment of his disappearing forever exclaimed, "Vergiss mein nicht," which, Englished, means "Forget-me-not."

A young lady of New York amuses herself with humming birds as pets. They build their nests in the lace curtains and have raised little families in the parlor. There are plants for them to fly about in, and every day the florist sends a basket of flowers for them to extract the honey from. They are like little rainbows flying about the room, and they light on the head of their dainty mistress with perfect freedom. She has an especial affinity for the feathered race, and pigeons, canaries and bullfinches are included among her household favorites.

A plant grows in Mixteca, Mexico, which the natives call the "herb of prophecy." A dose of it produces sleep similar in all respects to the hypnotic state. The subject answers with closed eyes questions that are put to him, and is completely insensible. The pathologic state brings with it a kind of prophetic gift and double sight. Furthermore he loses his will, and is completely under the control of another. On returning to himself he remembers nothing of what he has done.

Italian archeologists, who for some time have been at work uncovering the ancient Greek city of Sybaris, in Italy, have lighted upon evidences of a more ancient city upon which Sybaris was built. The necropolis is in an undisturbed state, and adds strong evidence to the belief in a high Italian civilization prior to the Etruscan and contemporaneous with the building of the Pyramids. Italian scientists place its decline at 1000 B. C., and believe that its people were the real inventors of the prehistoric walls which exist all over Italy where there are signs of Etruscan habitation. A report shortly to be issued under the auspices of the Italian Government is claimed to be a complete demonstration of its prior Etruscan civilization.

A suit of some importance has recently been decided against the city of Montreal. At one of the carnivals an old lady was struck by a piece of fire-works and killed. Her husband sued the city for $1,000 damages. The city pleaded that the woman had not exercised due care, as she approached too near the ice palace. Judge Loranger expressed the opinion that as the city had seen fit to allow dangerous pyrotechnic displays on the public squares without the necessary precaution to guard the life of the people, it was liable for damages. The award was $1,000 and all costs to date, and the Judge remarked that it was regrettable that a larger sum could not be allowed.

A curious step has been taken in the administration of justice to criminals in Belgium. M. Lejeune, Minister of Justice, is the author of a law according to which criminals of a small type will receive no punishment for the first offence. First offenders will be tried, lectured and sentenced, but the sentenced will not be carried out. If convicted a second time, however, the criminal will be treated with the greatest severity, and in addition to serving the sentence meted to him for his second crime, he will undergo the punishment from which he was first let off. This law will release thousands of King Leopold's subjects who are now in jail. It is believed it will have a wholesome effect in preventing criminals from becoming hardened and repeating their wickedness through dread of sentence behind them.

A novel custom is observed in the Church of St. Ives, Hants, England. A correspondent thus describes it: "On a table in the church at the chancel steps were placed six Bibles, and near them a box and three dice. Six boys and six girls solemnly watched over by the vicar, and a crowd of parishioners, throw dice each three times to see which would have the six bibles. Three went to the boys and three to the girls. This remarkable custom dates from 1674, when Dr. Robert Wylde bequeathed £30, of which the yearly interest was to be spent in buying six Bibles, not to cost more than seven shillings and six pence each, to be cast for by dice on the Communion table every year by six boys and six girls of the town." Lately the communion table has not been used for the purpose, it being considered an improper use.

There is a woman on exhibition in one of the New York dime museums who is known as the champion gum chewer. She sits on a raised platform along with an assortment of freaks. She wears a rich evening dress of white satin. For full twelve hours a day she is on duty. Her jaws seem tireless, and with a few intermissions for rest she chews away at a cud of gum, paying no heed to the jocosse spectators, making no answer to their remarks and deriving apparent satisfaction from the admiration which she feels that she excites.

It has been discovered that there are 3,500,000 "ems" in the English Bible, 20,000,000 in Webster's Dictionary, and 140,000,000 in the Encyclopedia Britannica. There are several other matters of interest in the books named, but the genius who made the above discovery had, of course, no time to search them out.

Harper's Bazar thus defines the duties of the "best man" at the modern fashionable wedding:—"A 'best man' attends his friend to the altar, holds his hat and keeps the ring until it is needed. He sends the bride as handsome a present as he can afford—a bracelet, fan, opera glass, piece of silver, or a pretty bit of furniture, a set of teacups or a diamond star. He then officiates at the breakfast, pays the clergyman (that is, acts as the groom's cashier), and throws the rice and the slipper after the departing pair; he is the aid, the guide, the familiar friend."

All parents should see that their children—girls as well as boys—learn to swim. As a form of agreeable and healthful exercise, swimming is particularly well suited for women, and their greater buoyancy offsets their lack of strength. Swimming can be taught in a few lessons by a kind and judicious teacher, and when the father can himself swim, there is no one better fitted for performing this duty, at least for his girls, than himself. The time will probably come when swimming will form a part of the course of instruction at our public schools, but individual action should now take the place of the systematic instruction the public will at some future time provide.

A Sunshiny Husband.

A sunshiny husband makes a merry, beautiful home, worth having, worth working for. If a man is breezy, cheery, considerate and sympathetic, his wife sings in her heart over her puddings and her mending basket, counts the hours till he returns at night, and renews her youth in the security she feels of his approbation and admiration. You may think it weak or childish, if you please, but it is the admired wife who hears words of praise and receives smiles of commendation, who is capable, discreet, and executive. I have seen a timid, meek, self-distrusting little body fairly bloom into strong, self-reliant womanhood, under the tonic and the cordial of companionship with a husband who really went out of his way to find occasion for showing her how fully he trusted her judgment, and how tenderly he deferred to her opinion. In home life there should be no jar, no striving for place, no insisting on prerogatives, or divisions of interest. The husband and the wife are each the complement of the other. And it is just as much his duty to be cheerful as it is hers to be patient; his right to bring joy into the door, as it is hers to sweep and garnish the pleasant interior. A family where the daily walk of the father makes life a festival is filled with something like heavenly benediction.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind. [April 1 '88]

TO THE DEAF.—A person cured of Deafness and noises in the head of 23 years' standing by a simple remedy will send a description of it FREE to any person who applies to NICHOLSON, 30 St. John Street, Montreal. 4m—m14
