Father Damien, the Young Belgian Priest.

In the midst of the Pacific Ocean—as a short, half way house between China and California—stands the Sandwich Islands. Unhappily for the amiable and light-hearted inhabitants of those lovely islands, they were revealed to Europe by Captain Cook. Poor seamen and travellers took to those islands vices and diseases which they had never known until Europeans visited them. Since they were brought into contact with Europe their population has fallen off from 40,000 to 44,000, and the inhabitants are actually threatened with extinction. In 1848, the awful plague of leprosy was added to their woes. This plague assumed such proportions that at last it became absolutely necessary to isolate the lepers—a most distressing necessity in any case, but peculiarly painful to such a social and light-hearted race as the inhabitants of the Sandwich Islands. At the north-western end of the group stands Molokai, and a part of this island was selected as the leper settlement. The northern end of Molokai juts out into the Southern Sea, a grassy plain of 6,000 acres, separated from the rest of the island by a gigantic natural wall of rock, 3,000 feet high. This natural wall is covered with vegetation. It is a "cataract of creepers, broken with the foam of flowers." But this lonely spot is deprived of its beauty by the fact that it is nevertheless a prison home. Here separated from friends, are found 800 lepers. The average life of these doomed beings does not exceed four years, and about 150 of them die every year.

Father Damien, a young Belgian priest, fired with the love of Jesus Christ, resolved to live and die in the service of this leper settlement. When he landed on the spot there was no doctor or any other official among them. He was the only healthy person. All alike were doomed to die; and we cannot to some extent imagine the condition of this miserable settlement in the absence of all law, authority and moral restraint. To use his own words, it was "a living graveyard." In their miserable grass huts the lepers were living pell-mell, without distinction of age or sex, old or new cases, all more or less stronger to one another. They passed their time in playing cards, dancing, drinking and nameless debauchery. It was, in fact, a veritable hell on earth. The presence of this Christianlike man soon changed everything. An eye-witness testifies that "his kindness, charity, sympathy and zeal had not long to wait before their influence was felt. Before he reached Molokai the leper settlement was squalid, hideous, almost hellish; now, it is a peaceful, law-abiding community, presenting an attractive and even on some sides cheerful appearance. The wretched grass huts, which had been the scene of nameless vice, were superseded by whitewashed wooden cottages, with pleasant verandahs and delightful gardens; pasture lands and fields gave signs of careful cultivation; and in the midst of the people stood two churches and several schools. But with all this delightful change, the sadness of the situation could scarcely be relieved. It is difficult to grasp the grim significance of the fact that the chief industry of the island is in the making of coffins. Father Damien, during his brief ministry of mercy, consoled the dying hours of two thousand lepers. For eleven years he lived, the once healthy man, in that loathsome crowd. Then the awful disease snatched him, and his sacrifice was complete. For four long years of agony, to use his own touching expression, he toiled 'up to his Golgotha,' and on the 10th of April, 1889, the welcome angel of death bade his anguish cease forever, and he fell asleep in Jesus. At the announcement of his decease, a wave of profound emotion passed over the entire civilized world. Wealth, war, learning, all the objects of human ambition, were seen to be worthless and contemptible in the divine light which shines from that glassy slope far away in the Pacific Ocean. When the millionaires and statesmen and warriors of the nineteenth century are all forgotten, the leper priest of Molokai will still be lovingly remembered on earth and in heaven.—Rev. Hugh Price Hughes.

A dashingly attempt has been made to besmirch the character of this devoted man, and to minimize the service which he rendered; but he is recognized by the Master, who has said, "Whosoever shall lose his life for My sake shall find it," and the Roman Catholic Church has truly estimated his value by sending out two priests, two lay brothers and three Franciscan sisters, who hastened in offering themselves to fill his place, and show, as he had done, the sorrows and the death of the unfortunate lepers of Molokai.

DIED.

Frederick Gordon, only child of John T. and Mary A. Hutchinson, died at their home 223 Harkness St., Malden, Mass., on May 6th, 1890, aged 2 years and 11 months, the cause of death being congestion of the brain.

At Fairfield, Lot 46, on the 12th May, after an illness of a few days, Mr. Geo. Campbell, son of the late Gregory Campbell, and the only remaining son at home at the time of his death. Mr. Campbell was about 30 years of age. His remains were interred at St. Columba's Church.

At Monticello, Lot 42, on the 10th inst., after an illness of two years, Matilda McCormack, in her 87th year. Her remains were interred at St. Margaret's on the 12th inst.

The relatives and friends of Captain John Gordon, second son of Peter Gordon, Esq., Roseneath, Lot 52, were made sad by hearing of his death, which occurred in a New York hospital on May 2nd, after a short illness, in the 49th year of his age. The greater part of his life, from his sixteenth year, was spent on the ocean. He sailed to most of the principal ports. During the last six years he sailed for a New York firm, by whom he was highly esteemed. After a short visit to the home of his childhood, he had returned to take charge of his vessel, when death cut short his earthly career. Truly, "In the midst of life we are in death." His remains, which were brought home by his brother Alfred, now rest beside those of his mother in the old burial place in Brudenell. The aged father, with five brothers and three sisters, await the final of the lengthening "shadows."

Prince Edward Island.

TWO SONNETS.

Prince Edward Island, nestling of the sea,
My every dream of thee was one of good,
Since first upon thy summer shore I stood,
And looked in wonderment on wood and lea,
The sky and birds and flowers came back to me,
And I would not forget them if I could;
Although not always in a merry mood
I see thee, or without sad memory.

Prince Edward's Isle, favored art thou and blest;
Nature and Providence have decked the birds
Of the St. Lawrence more than all the rest
If life indeed be long, the world be wide,
The days I spent with thee will still be best,
And fair and loved as thou art, none beside.

If oft thy sons have left thee, lovely Isle,
'Tis not for weariness or soot of thee;
Voices have called to them across the sea
And bid them venture into such exile;
For larger scope and destiny the while;
But from home-love and longing never free,
They turn to thee each hour, thy name the key
Unlocks life's best and brings to grief a smile.

Thou art the mother of such men that all
The nations ask for them; thy noble brave
Lags not when men spring forth at honor's call,
Thy axemen strong that know how fame is brewed;

I, an adopted son, call curses down
On son of thine that seeks not her renown.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Mr. Scott on Dr. Howard Crosby

SIR,—The remarks of Mr. John Scott upon the example of Chancellor Crosby, as one of unalloyed integrity and Christian zeal, who at the same time is opposed to Prohibition methods, only form another sad illustration "of the rarity of Christian charity." Dr. Crosby writes and uses his great influence to oppose the substitution of something else for what he conscientiously believes to be the Scriptural "kind" in the sacramental cup. He holds that such a change would be a rationalistic impeachment of the Founder of Christianity and of the Apostles. His views, for selfish purposes, are perverted by the Brewers' Association; and, straightaway, Mr. Scott, and those of like mind, conclude that Dr. Crosby is in unholily alliance with the distillers; and that for this "some other reason" he deserves to be hounded. Let Mr. Scott meditate upon 1 Cor., chap. xiii. But, apart from the uncharitable suspicion, does not Mr. Scott see in what a terrible way his words reflect back infinitely further than Dr. Crosby.

Eighteen hundred years ago, in a drunken age, "Brewers' Associations," if such had existed, might also have perverted holiest example and teachings to their base ends. I did not intimate that Dr. Crosby was spurned by all Prohibitionists. Drs. H. Johnson and J. E. Funk, his opponents in the celebrated Symposium on Prohibition, met Dr. C. as a Christian, high-minded opponent, who himself was true to his convictions as a teetotaler. Charity towards those who differ with us—that was my plea. C.

The Slanderer.

SIR,—Every community has, unfortunately, in its midst, those who, by evil speaking, bring many a heartache to the family circle. I enclose a slip from an exchange, which I trust may be the means of doing good in our fair city.

May 19, 1890.

JUSTICE.

"Against slander there is no defence. It starts with a word, with a nod, with a shrug, with a look, with a smile. It is pestilence walking in darkness, spreading contagion far and wide, which the most weary traveller cannot avoid; it is the heart-searching dagger of the dark assassin; it is the poisoned arrow whose wounds are incurable; it is the mortal sting of the deadly adder; murder its employment, innocence its prey, and ruin its sport. The man who breaks into my dwelling, or meets me on the public road and robs me of my property, does me injury. He stops me on the way to wealth, and strips me of my hard-earned savings, involves me in difficulty, and brings my family to penury and want. But he does me an injury that can be repaid. Industry and economy may again bring me into circumstances of ease and affluence. But the man who circulates false reports concerning my character, who exposes every act of my life which may be misrepresented to my disadvantage, who goes first to this and then to that individual, tells them he is very tender of my reputation, enjoins upon them the strictest secrecy, and then fills their ears with hearsays and rumors, and, what is worse, leaves them to dwell upon the hints and suggestions of his own busy imagination—the man who thus 'filches from me my good name' does me an injury which neither industry, charity, nor time itself can repair."

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used by mothers for children teething over fifty years with perfect success. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from the teething or other causes.
