Code Amendment Asked

By STEPHEN SCOTT

VANCOUVER (CP) — The governing general council of the Canadian Medical Association with at least tacit support from its Roman Catholic members, Wednesday went on record as favoring birth control devices.

The council called for amendment to the much-broken section of the code of ethics forbidding giving advice on birth control, or selling or advertising birth control devices.

The code was made up of representatives from each province, including Quebec, did not confer on the Roman Catholic members of its committee on maternal welfare.

Dr. L. Robert of Toronto, chairman of the committee, said there was little debate from the almost 200 council members.

And the committee approved the change despite the fact that some of the members are in the Roman Catholic Church which is opposed to birth control devices.

"Words of change," one council member said.

MENTAL HEALTH REPORT

Also accepted was a report from the mental health committee saying that the trend of increasing hospitalization and mental health generally with the rest of the medical profession should continue.

Legislation that deals with the mentally ill should be wiped out, he said. There should only be legislation dealing with those who were mentally ill and refuse treatment, present in all provinces had legislation dealing with the admittance of all patients to mental hospitals.

"The crucial hour has come and things are going to happen fast in our side," the strongman premier told his people in a speech at Rach Gia, on the Gulf of Thailand.

Possible expansion of the American-backed war was a subject of grave concern in the appointment of Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor to the ambassadorship in Saigon, which was vacated by Henry Cabot Lodge.

Dixon announced the rule and issued an accompanying 18-page statement of findings as he testified before a House committee.

Heart Attacks Give Warning

San-Francisco (AP)—Impending heart attacks reveal themselves at least a year in advance and need never occur, says an Ohio physician who has studied heart disease for more than 18 years.

Heart health is easy — just don't race your motor when you don't have to, advises Dr. Robert S. Green of the Heart Research Foundation of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Dr. Green and his associates have surveyed more than 1,000 heart attack victims — their surviving close relatives — and come up with five common-sense rules for avoiding heart trouble.

1. Act your age
2. Accept your limitations.
3. Condition yourself for each new activity.
4. Avoid fatigue.

Interference in CBCs Fatly Denied By Pearson

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson flatly denied Wednesday he or anyone on his behalf asked the publicly-owned CBC from televising the controversial film on a day in the life of the prime minister.

He spoke in a noisy Commons as the CBC board of directors met here to decide whether to show the film Mr. Pearson after all, in response to opposition demands and a personal request Friday by Mr. Pearson.

The prime minister replied at length in the continuing debate on interim supply, to accusations by Conservatives Tuesday night that he had deceived the House and told only half-truths about the film.

But that wasn't the end of it. Opposition leader Diefenbaker immediately resumed the attack on the government, saying while Mr. Pearson denied censorship, what the prime minister had said admitted censorship of the film's content.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the case should be sent to a parliamentary committee and the film's producer, Richard Ballentine, called to give evidence.

Mr. Pearson said he had had doubts that the film should be made, but the CBC had initially offered to protect his personal privacy, ensure good taste and keep government secrets in making the film.

Neither he nor anyone on his staff had suggested the film be made. The initiative had come from CBC producer Ross MacLean who suggested a new candidate's type of approach.

The Murphy decision is expected to be announced today, Mr. Pearson said if the film shows, it probably will have the biggest audience in history because of the political ruckus it has generated and he welcomed that.

The prime minister became embroiled in a wild scene in the Commons as he and Mr. Diefenbaker waded each other down, and Mr. Pearson accused the publicly-owned television network of "wallowing in the gutter."

Mr. Pearson said he asked a member of his staff last Monday to "bring to the attention of the CBC" certain portions of the film that he wanted deleted.

These portions contained conversations that he did not want to make public, others were inappropriate to personal life.

One sequence included a "very personal local remark" by Mrs. Pearson who was not aware she was being filmed and recorded by a "camouflaged camera."

Another portion the prime minister wanted deleted included a comment about Mr. Diefenbaker's election to the Commons, clerk of the Privy Council and Canada's top civil servant.

Mr. Pearson said the CBC made some of the requested cuts, but declined to make some more technical standards.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the prime minister, asking him to sit aside his agreement with Mr. Ballentine for a veto power over the film.

The CBC then set up a preview of the film April 30 for three cabinet ministers—Trade Minister Sharp, External Affairs Minister Martin and Labor Minister MacEachen—and members of the prime minister's staff.

COMMENT MADE

Mr. Pearson said the government figures made comments about the film among themselves, but did not communicate them to the Commons. On May 20, the CBC announced the film was being cancelled because of shows, it probably will have the biggest audience in history because of the political ruckus it has generated and he welcomed that.
