

MR. AND MRS. JAMES CRILLY WOOD

Wood - Cameron Wedding Solemnized At St. Paul's

St. Paul's Anglican Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday afternoon, September 5th, when Joan Fay, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Cameron, became the bride of James Crilly, younger son of Mrs. George C. Wood and the late Mr. Wood. Rev. Canon E.M. Malone performed the double ring ceremony. Mr. John Harris, church organist, played the wedding music. During the signing of the register Mrs. Douglas Cameron and Mrs. David Cox sang "O Perfect Love". Vases and baskets of white gladioli were arranged in the chancel and the guest pews were marked with white satin bows and gladioli. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length model gown of white chiffon taffeta with a lace yoke embroidered in iridescent sequins and seed pearls. The dress had a fitted bodice with dropped waist line, long skirt extending into a short train. She wore a chapel length veil of French illusion held in place with a crown headpiece trimmed with seed pearls and carried a cascade bouquet of pink gladioli. The bride is a nursing graduate of the Montreal General Hospital, Montreal, and the groom is a graduate of Royal Roads Tri-Service College, Victoria, B.C., and is now a Midshipman with the Royal Canadian Navy. Married At Borden Lovely Choral Music

Miss Mary Helen Joan Sexton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sexton, Borden, was united in marriage with Mr. John Austin Reginald Connolly, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Connolly, Bedeque. The place of ceremony was the Sacred Heart Church, Borden, on August 8th, at 8:30 a.m. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. R. F. MacDonald. The organist was Mrs. Clinton Howatt. The soloists were Mrs. Michael Ness and Mrs. Everett McKenna. The selections sung were "Mother at Your Feet Is Kneeling"; "O, God of Loveliness"; "Panis Angelicus"; "On this Day, O Beautiful Mother". The church decorations were assorted summer flowers. The guests' pews were marked with white satin ribbons and sweet peas. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a floor length gown of nylon net over white taffeta with insets of lace over taffeta. The bolero was Chantilly lace with sleeves coming to a point at the fingertips and adorned with sequins. The head dress was a coronet style tiara, with sequins and pearls. The veil was chapel length bordered with lace flowers and sequins. The bride carried a sheaf of red roses. The matron of honor was Mrs. Leonard Roberts. Her gown was floor mauve net over taffeta with white lace bolero and matching mitts and headpiece in tiara style of nylon tulle in ruffles with sequin trim. Her bouquet was a nosegay of mums. The bridesmaid was Miss Winnifred Connolly, sister of the groom. She wore a pale green floor length gown of nylon net over taffeta with white lace bolero and matching mitts and headpiece in tiara style of nylon tulle in ruffles with sequin trim. Her bouquet was an umbrella-shaped basket of mixed flowers. The best man was the groom. The ushers were Baden Sedon, a brother of the bride, and Austin Connolly, a cousin of the groom. The place of reception was the Mulberry Lodge, Summerside. The decorations were sweet peas. The three tier wedding cake topped with miniature bride and groom centred the bride's table. The bride's mother wore a two piece navy rayon turtleneck crepe dress, lavishly detailed with velvet and braid dotted with rhinestones. She wore white accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The wedding trip was through the Maritimes and Maine. The bride's travelling costume was a gingham suit with pink accessories. Her corsage was a nosegay of mums. Connolly will return to Summerside.

TRANS-ATLANTIC

Savvas Georgiou, a latter-day Ulysses, holds out his arms as if to embrace the island of Ithaca in western Greece at the end of a two-month voyage from New York. He was accompanied on the sailing vessel Hara, meaning joy in Greek, by his wife, Mary Susan who can be seen in stern of boat. The craft has no engine and only a small magnetic compass with which to navigate.

ELEN'S DIARY

Electricity Is Magic

Playing truant from the continuing harvesting this morning, the husbands and fathers of this place extended the fences about a pasture to take a fresh area for the young cattle, and the horses, who these times live leisurely there. We see, when in that neighborhood, the po' old mare steal away from the sunlight to spend a quiet time in the shade of a hedgehog, into the country as if in contemplation, or it may be as we have seen her, turning to regard the roofs of the buildings over the fields that she her home.

"And so... you stayed at home alone and had a time washing, with a board and tub" one of kin made light of a pleasant pastime recently. "Why didn't you use the machine?" Saving it, I suppose?" she teased. "Well, firstly because having only a few pieces to wash it was quicker; secondly, the convenience of the present-you know; the just-was-forget part of it. And thirdly..."

"Thirdly" she giggled "that like the little old lady in Church reminded the Minister who preached by a window. "The wind took that one!" I guess."

"Lastly then, it's an enjoyable work-one rubs away with the stains every last annoyance and care."

"Care!" she echoed, "with only the pair of you! That's a laugh."

Says Canadians Even Read While At Their Meals

TORONTO (CP) — A pretty Dutch waitress, Theresa Wienega is horrified at the way Canadians gobble their food.

"They seem to look on eating as a necessary chore rather than a pleasant occupation, which is the way most Europeans consider it," says Theresa.

The blue-eyed, red-haired girl is working in a restaurant here to help finance a modelling career. She can spot newcomers to the country by their leisurely eating habits. Canadians, she says, even read over their meals so that they don't waste a second.

Most Europeans look on eating as an art and take their time about it, she explains. But Canadians are generous with tips, she adds.

3 Women Make 100 Babies' Layettes

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—Any mother-to-be assembling clothing for the new baby may be interested to know that this summer, three Kitchener women have made 100 babies' layettes, including 1,500 articles, for needy families overseas.

The clothing is to be distributed by the Canadian Unitarian Service committee, which has headquarters in Ottawa.

Mrs. Carl Kaufman, her mother, Mrs. George Peace and Bess Feathers have made 62 dresses, 450 toques, 100 pairs of socks, 100 yard dolls and numerous button bags.

Each layette contains six diapers, two nightgowns, two vests, booties, mitts, a bonnet, coat, blanket, soap and safety pins.

Says Mrs. Kaufman: "We bought 1,000 yards of flannelette and 120 pounds of wool to complete the articles."

The trio have just received 250 cut-out dresses which they will make toward a shipment of 5,000 to be sent overseas in November.

Houses Are New, Neighbors Chilly

LONDON (CP) — Families moving from the east end of London into new housing estates enjoy having hot and cold running water and other amenities, but are worried by the lack of community spirit.

Dr. Michael Young, director of community studies in London's Bethnal Green area, said this was shown in a three-year survey conducted among some 1,000 persons. The new estates were cold and lacked neighborliness, he said.

In East London, families were on friendly terms with their neighbors and each "turning," as the street was called, had its shops and pubs as neighborhood gathering places. But in the housing estates people missed their relatives, there was no one to turn to in an emergency and some neighbors were "toffee-nosed," or unfriendly.

"We had expected that neighbors would take the place of relatives, but in fact this did not happen to any marked extent," Dr. Young said in a speech.

"Neighbors rarely gave more than casual assistance in time of illness, rarely looked after children when the wives were out at work, rarely ever called for a sociable evening."

"Neighbors were said to be og-headed, high and might, jealous and a cut above everybody else."

KEEP IN TRIM

Weight Gain After Surgery Not Inevitable

By IDA JEAN KAIN
An excessive weight gain following surgery, particularly after a complete hysterectomy, is all too common—so common, it has come to be accepted as natural. Two letters in the same mail discuss the matter, one lamenting the burdensome poundage, the other triumphantly reporting success in reducing.

"I wonder if you could help us women who have had an hysterectomy. There are several women in our town who have had this operation, and we all keep getting fatter and fatter. We have formed clubs to try to reduce, but to no avail. Our doctor says it's natural to gain. Most of us never weighed more than 130 to 135 pounds before the operation, and now we have each gained 40 to 50 pounds."

The second letter was written expressly to offer hope to such overweighters.

"I have kept my weight normal for five years even after a complete hysterectomy. So many women just cannot believe this is possible. At one time I weighed 212 pounds. I now weigh 147 pounds and I have held this weight for the past five years. Never again will I allow the excess fat to come back on. Tell you overweighters that if they really desire to reduce, it can be done. Please send along diets for friends."

EASY MISTAKE
It is easy to add poundage folders and each "turning," as the street was called, had its shops and pubs as neighborhood gathering places. But in the housing estates people missed their relatives, there was no one to turn to in an emergency and some neighbors were "toffee-nosed," or unfriendly.

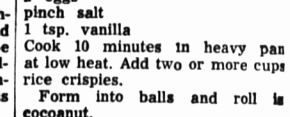

"We had expected that neighbors would take the place of relatives, but in fact this did not happen to any marked extent," Dr. Young said in a speech.
