RESUMES THIS MORNING

Crowd Packs Courtroom To Hear Suit Against City

The courtroom was packed in Supreme Court yesterday as the case of John Henry Reid and Elizabeth L. Reid versus the City of Charlottetown and Chief of Police Stems Webster and Sgt. Charles Ready was resumed. Chief Justice Thane A. Campbell presided.

At the opening of the session Chief Justice Campbell stated the court wished to pay special tribute to two distinguished Canadians who passed away recently. He referred to R.V. Vaughan, retiring president of the Canadian National Railway and S.T. Wood, former RCMP commissioner for the distinguished part he had played in law enforcement in Canada.

Elizabeth L. Reid was on the stand when yesterday morning's session got underway and there were six witnesses called after Miss Reid before court adjourned.

Witnesses included: Joseph Molyneux, Clarence Reid, Mrs. Marion MacPhee, Cpl. Allan MacLeod, city police; Joseph Egan and John Henry Reid. All these witnesses reside in the Charlottetown area.

John Henry Reid was under cross-examination by John P. Nicholson, counsel for the co-defendants Stems Webster and Charles Ready, when the session was adjourned at approximately five o'clock last evening.

Miss Reid in her statement of claim has asked for damages in the amount of $25,000 and when cross examined by Mr. Nicholson as to how she arrived at this figure she stated in her testimony that she arrived at this figure because of the loss of business due to actions by the defendants.

LOCKS ON DOORS
Joseph Molyneux, a carpenter employed by the city, testified he accompanied Constables Trainer and MacLeod to John Henry Reid's restaurant on Nov. 19, 1964, and placed hasps on two doors at that restaurant. Mr. Molyneux said he acted on an order from Chief of Police Stems Webster and added that this was the only man to tell him to put the hasps on.

Under cross examination by Mr. Foster, Cpl. MacLeod said John Reid a customer in the restaurant. She described the police coming on Nov. 19, 1964 to put locks on the doors.

Cpl. Allan MacLeod of the city police force was called by Mr. Gillis and in direct examination stated when he went down to put the locks on the doors he didn't have any paper, but had received orders to lock the restaurant from Chief of Police Stems Webster.

Under cross examination by Mr. Foster, Cpl. MacLeod said John Reid had told him the Department of Health was closing up the restaurant before he left the police station to put the locks on the restaurant.

Joseph Egan stated he was in the restaurant when the police arrived on the day the locks went on the restaurant and, left

DETAILS EVENTS
In direct examination yesterday, John Reid described the agreement between him and his sister about the management of the restaurant since July of 1963 and told in detail the events that took place when the police arrived to lock the restaurant on Nov. 19, 1964.

Mr. Reid stated that shortly after the restaurant was locked, Giles Cantwell, public health inspector, told him his restaurant was clean as his (Cantwell's house) and he didn't know why it was closed.

Mr. Reid also told of his arrest, being refused bail, appearing in court at 4:30 p.m. Saturday afternoon, spending a week-end in jail, having 21 charges laid against him and getting out on $100 bail on Monday morning. He said he offered $1,000 to $2,500 cash bail to be allowed bail on Saturday afternoon, but was refused.

He was later convicted on a charge of operating a restaurant without a license and fined $50. This decision was reversed on an appeal to Supreme Court and the remaining 20 charges were withdrawn.

KEPT IN CELL
The plaintiff stated the cell in which he was kept in the city police station was "the most filthy place" he had ever been in his life.

Mr. Reid told of attempting to be tried by a magistrate other than James A. Haslam, but was tried by Mr. Haslam.

He said he has had no rest from the restaurant for 15 months now and his legal expenses as a result of these actions were approximately $1,100.

Mr. Reid then produced several editions of The Evening Patriot which told of his arrest and subsequent actions against him. Under cross examination by Mr. Nicholson, Mr. Reid produced two more editions of The Evening Patriot with pictures of a sign in the restaurant reading "gone to state my claim," then a later edition showing Allison Gillis going into the prothonotary's office to file out against the city for $146,000.

The case resumes this morning at 11 o'clock.

Two Copper Producers Boost Domestic Prices

TORONTO (CP)—Two major Canadian copper producers has raised their domestic prices to 45 cents a pound from 40 cents in moves that brought quick criticism from Ottawa.

Some large users also condemned the increases amid indications that if they remain in force the cost will be passed on to the private consumer.

The boosts were instituted by Noranda Sales Corp. and Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd. A spokesman for International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., said in New York the company is considering the situation but made no further comment.

The domestic price increases mark the latest round in a metal price war that is going on around the world. Earlier this week Canadian producers raised the European overseas price to 42 cents a pound in United States currency from 38 cents, following the lead of major South American and African companies.

The price in the U.S., however, remains at 35 cents a pound. The large U.S. producers tried last fall to raise the price, but were forced to rescind the two-cent increase after the government stepped in. The government released 200,000 tons of copper from its stockpiles to try to take the pressure off short supplies, but metal officials say copper still is in extremely short supply.

HEAVY DEMAND
Some say demand will outstrip production this year by about 10 per cent, offering little hope for an easing of the tight situation.

Canada's production in 1965 was estimated at about 600,000 tons and is expected to increase about 10 per cent this year.

In Ottawa news of the increase was described by one official as "ridiculous."

One federal government official said the rise appears unwarranted from the point of view of costs. He noted, however, that prices are regulated by the world supply situation.

Several major users said they will need time to assess the effects of the increase, but they indicated few have large stockpiles.

Egg Prices Take Drop

Declining egg markets and plunging prices are causing concern again in the poultry world, it was learned yesterday. One report indicated one local sales outlet had gone as far as London, England, in an attempt to market eggs, without success.

There are approximately 1,000 cases of eggs surplus to requirements in the province at the present time, one knowledgeable poultry spokesman said, and he attributed it mostly to the fact people have been so full of Christmas and New Year's seasons' turkeys and plum puddings, they just haven't been eating eggs.

Prices to producers have slumped from a high of 60 cents for grade A large late last fall to 30 cents today. The farmer was getting 52 to 55 cents as recently as December 20, this source said.

There's good news for consumers, though, the same man said. "Some Charlottetown stores were offering cartoned eggs at 47 cents per dozen." They had been up as high as 75 cents a few weeks ago, the spokesman indicated.

It's not so long since poultrymen were marketing eggs at almost ruinous prices. There was some apprehension today, apparently, that this situation might return, though producers have been enjoying most profitable prices now for several months.

The poultry spokesmen suggested that the local surplus situation could be cleared up in a few weeks if every person ate one, or two more eggs per day. Now that the price at the grocery store has been reduced sharply, it was suggested that this would appeal to the average housewife.

Missing Cars Are Recovered

A 1960 Volkswagen car reported to the local police station as stolen from Barbour's Garage on Tuesday was recovered yesterday on Churchill Avenue and there was no damage to the vehicle.

A 1957 Pontiac owned by Alvin MacLeod, Summerside, and a 1964 Ford owned by Keith Hooper have also been recovered according to a city police report.

Meet Planned For Teachers

SUMMERSIDE — Anglican Sunday school teachers and observers from the parishes of Summerside, St. Eleanor's and New London will gather at St. Mary's Parish Hall, Summerside, Sunday afternoon, Jan. 9 to view a teacher-training film and to evaluate the first four months' use of the new parish education program.

The film is titled "Here And Now" and is a production of the United States Episcopal Church. It shows an actual Sunday school class session, and is designed to needs of children and how they may best be helped to learn and develop spiritually.

The teachers will be invited to comment on the new Anglican Sunday school curriculum introduced last fall.

The meeting will begin at 2:30 p.m. and will end before evening at St. Mary's Church at

Angus Breeders To Try Breed Promotion Effort

Prince Edward Island's Angus cattle breeders will endeavor to spark an effective breed promotion effort through the Maritime Angus Breeders Association when it meets in annual session at Amherst on Saturday afternoon. The decision was taken here last night at the Island association's annual meeting where Leo P. McIsaac, Mermaid was re-elected president.

Four Island breeders will carry the Island's promotion message to the Maritime meeting. One idea suggested last night was that a Maritime secretary should be chosen who would be able to do some effective field work among the estimated 75 Angus breeders in the Maritime area. At least one visit per year to each breeder was suggested as a minimum, perhaps some letters as well.

Irving MacDonald, York; Frank Mutch, Cherry Valley; Clair Mayhew, Margate; Boyd Dixon, Clyde River; and John Kenny, Charlottetown were named as delegates.

Named to the Maritime directorate are Mr. McIsaac and Mr. MacDonald.

Stewart Eagles, Canada department of agriculture, Moncton, explained the requirements and the benefits of a record of performance (ROP) leading program for beef cattle. Livestock Director David Peacock also spoke briefly.

The organization of a breeder cattle sale on a Maritime scale was suggested as a possibility, also that breeding cattle for sale could be listed so that prospective buyers would know where to find good Angus cattle.

SPONSOR CLASS

The association will sponsor a class this year for heifer calves at the provincial exhibition, and the amount of $100 was made available for prize money covering the placings from first to 10th. The calves eligible would range from those born January 1, 1966 to the younger ones born sometime prior to the exhibition in August. No minimum age was suggested last night.

There was also a suggestion that the young bull class under the Hays' formula covers too wide an age spread.

Other officers named last night are Clair Mayhew, vice-president and David Mutch, Mermaid, secretary-treasurer. Retiring secretary-treasurer John Kenny reported for the past year's activities, showing a satisfactory bank balance. "We now have some money to do something with," he observed.

Directors named for Kings are George A. Campbell, Fortune and Buddy Loane, Kilmuir; for Queens, Barry Rankin, Bunbury and Chesley Hughes, Covehead; for Prince, Keir Warren, Margate and Errol Sletson, O'Leary. Mr. McIsaac presided.

Bowing Was 'A Pleasure'

By CHRISTOPHER GLEDHILL
On Thursday night at the Confederation Centre the Community Concert Association presented the Rabinofs, a very fine violin and piano duo whom I have not heard before.

Beethoven's sonata in G major, Op. 30, no. 3, was given a very ingratiating reading. The sheer verve of the two outer movements formed a fitting frame to the tender nobility of the middle movement. Mr. Rabinof has a secure and at times dazzling technique which was not allowed to obscure.

In sonata playing the violin and piano should be equal partners, and I felt that Mrs. Rabinof remained too much in the background in the Beethovens.

There followed Max Bruch's Scottish Fantasy, a work which I fondly imagined had been put to rest permanently. I cannot understand why this gifted pair should have lavished so much care on this unwieldy piece of Teutonic schwaernererei, which like so many works of German origin goes on far too long. The connection with the racy spirit of Scotland is remote.

Mrs. Rabinof gave us a very enjoyable series of piano solos, including a very personal, somewhat idiosyncratic reading of Chopin's Scherzo in B flat minor and an ingeniously ingenious composition of her own. She also improvised very delightfully on the names of two young members of the audience.

We congratulate her on helping to revive this almost forgotten art which was at the core of the musical development of Bach, Mozart, Handel, Beethoven and other giants of composition.

The concert concluded with lullabies and fireworks, played with delicacy and fire by Mr. Rabinof. His tone is remarkably full and sweet. Admittedly he plays a Stradivarius that belonged to Kreisler, but his bowing was a pleasure to watch, and the results could be heard. In the last number, by Paganini, he opened the whole box of tricks — harmonics, left hand pizzicato, double and triple stopping — with mastery assurance, and left the audience gasping. Altogether this was a splendid evening of music-making.

Two Cars Collide, No One Injured

The damage was estimated at $180 and there were no injuries reported.

New Librarian Is Appointed

Mrs. Elizabeth Affleck has been appointed librarian of the Mount Stewart branch of the Prince Edward Island Libraries, it was announced yesterday by Dr. L.G. Dewar, minister of education.

Mrs. Affleck, whose appointment was effective Jan. 1, succeeds Mrs. James Doyle, who for a number of years gave service to the public in that area.

The Mount Stewart library, which has been closed for several weeks pending the appointment of a successor to Mrs. Doyle, re-opened on Tuesday, and is ready to serve readers of all ages in Mount Stewart and surrounding districts.

Library hours at the Mount Stewart branch are as follows: Tuesday, 3:00 to 5:00 p.m.; Wednesday, 7:00 to 9:00 p.m.; Saturday, 2:00 to 5:00 p.m., and 7:00 to 9:00 p.m.

The Mount Stewart library opened in new quarters in 1964, with the new building erected as that village's Centennial Year project. The stock consists of some 2,000 books, selected to suit the reading tastes of adults, teenagers, children, and pre-school readers.
