

Odds and Ends.

Love's young dream often turns out to be the nightmare. Prentice says that man was the chief consideration at the creation. Woman was only a side issue.

An irritable man, having been disappointed in his loots, threatened to eat up the shoemaker, but compromised by swallowing a cobbler.

Mark Twain, in his lecture on the Sandwich Islands, offers to illustrate the cannibals eating their food, if some lady will hand him a baby.

Jenkins says instead of marrying a woman of forty, he should prefer to take two twenties. The remark has a fiscal and also a funny sequel.

The man who wrote "Five o'clock in the morning," found that no saloons were open at the early hour, where he could get his bitters, so he lies a bed rather later now.

There was once an independent old lady, whose comments on the Bible were very pointed. Speaking of Adam's naming all the animals, she said she didn't think he deserved any credit for naming the pig—any one would know what to call him.

"I believe you think, sir, that I am stupid," "Oh, no, miss, you are wise beyond your years—and that is saying a great deal for your wisdom."

A drunken Englishman said to Judge Ledwith, of New York, recently, "Your honor, I'm a nobleman in disguise." "So I perceive," replied the Judge; "you're disguised in liquor, and as drunk as a lord."

A wolf, says Plutarch, peeping into a hut where a company of shepherds were regaling themselves with a joint of mutton, exclaimed, "What a clamor these men would have raised if they had caught me at such a feast."

"Well, my boy," said a lady member of a prison reform association, to a youngster who was under discipline for the theft of a coat, "you will try to do better next time?" "Yes um" was the hopeful reply, "I'll steal two!"

Teacher—"What part of speech is the word egg?" Boy—"Noun, sir." "What is its gender?" "Can't tell, sir." "Is it masculine, feminine or neuter?" "Can't say, sir, till it is hatched." "Well, then, my lad, you can tell me the case?" "Oh, yes!—the shell, sir."

"My son," said the elder Spriggles to his junior, thinking to enlighten the boy on the propagation of the hen species, "My son, do you know that chickens come out of eggs?" "Do they," said Spriggles, jr., as he licked his plate; "I thought eggs came out of chickens."

"I never shot a bird in my life," said a friend to an Irishman.

"I never shot anything in the shape of a bird but a squirrel," replied Pat, "which I kilt wid a stone, whin it fell into the river and was drowned, bad luck to me!"

Agriculture.

MAKE MORE BUTTER.

Butter is very high, and it is desirable to increase the supply of an article in such general use.

There is but one way of doing this. We can not increase the number of cows so as to meet the demand this fall and winter, but we can by liberal feeding enable the cows that we have to give more milk, or at least we can get milk containing from one-third to one-half more butter. That liberal feeding will do this there can be no question. What extra food to give depends on circumstances. The quality of the grass at this season is apt to deteriorate, and even when there is an abundance of it, a little rich food can be given to the cows with great advantage. When grass is short, there is still greater necessity for, and advantage in, providing extra food. In many sections there is much corn imperfectly cared, and there can be no better way of disposing of it than to feed it out, stalks and all, to milk cows. This will save husk. If well cured and put in small stacks, or in a barn, with layers between the corn, very few of the soft ears will mould. A liberal supply of such fodder will keep up the flow of milk until Christmas, and if the cows are provided with warm stables, butter may be made all winter.

When there is no fodder of this kind on the farm, feed ordinary corn stalks, or hay and straw, with a liberal allowance of some kind of grain or oil-cake. Probably corn meal is the cheapest food that can be used, and so far as the writer's experience extends, he has never found any trouble in using it. Four quarts a day to each cow have been used with great advantage, and at the present price of butter such feeding is quite profitable. Some dairymen prefer to feed half corn and half bran. When peas can be obtained at about the same price as corn, a mixture of equal parts of corn and peas is perhaps the very best food that can be given to a cow. If wheat bran was cheap, say but a little higher than hay, we would feed that also.

But our object is not so much to say which is the best grain to feed milk cows, as to urge farmers to feed grain of some kind. It does not so much matter what,—only give the cows a liberal supply of food, and they will return a liberal supply of butter. The kind of grain and the way of feeding is left to the judgement and good sense of the reader. When it is convenient it is better to "slop" the cows, but if not convenient the fodder may be chaffed and moistened with water, and a due proportion of meal mixed with it, care being taken that the mangers are so constructed as to avoid waste. When a good supply of food, regularly in feeding, comfortable stables cleaned out daily, proper ventilation, and water easily accessible, there is no trouble in doubling the ordinary quality of butter from now until mid-winter or later.—American Agriculturist.
