Improvement of Rustico Harbor.

From the specifications, which are very much in detail, we glean some interesting particulars about the new Government works to be undertaken for the improvement of Rustico Harbor. There are to be two breakwaters. One is to be on the west side of the harbor, one thousand two hundred and fifty feet long; five hundred feet to be of brush-work and seven hundred and fifty feet to be of crib-work—solid timber blocks filled with stones. The crib-work is to be twenty-two feet wide at the bottom and ten feet wide at the top. The whole work is to be floored with deal. The second breakwater is to be on the east side of the harbor. It is to be four hundred and fifty feet long and to be of brush-work throughout.

The tenders are to be in by the 17th of November instant, and the whole work is to be completed by the 20th of September, 1882.

The Northern Light.

This redoubtable vessel is ready, or, at least, nearly ready, again to buffet the waves and the ice of the wintry sea. A new coat of paint has made her appearance much more attractive than it was when she entered Charlottetown harbor after the conflicts of last season. But her appearance is not by any means the most material point in which she has been improved. The safety and comfort of her crew and passengers have been greatly increased. She has, in fact, been repaired from stem to stern, and is now stronger than she ever was.

Beginning at the stern, we find a new beam extending across the vessel. From this beam are knees and futtochs reaching all round to the walls, above which the screw works, and designed not only to strengthen the hull, but to counteract, as far as possible, the tremor (caused by the working of the screw) which used to annoy the passengers and particularly the fair occupants of the ladies' cabin. Then, in the engine room amidships, all the beams and knees have been refastened with stronger iron bolts, and several new knees have been supplied to strengthen the walls of the vessel. Across the forward end of the engine house, under the iron bulkhead, a large wooden beam has been fitted, and very strong knees have been placed at each end of it for the purpose of still further strengthening the hull. These are, again, supplemented by an additional iron beam running across the vessel between the boilers and bolted securely to the iron beam which was there before. Aft the engine house there are four new beams extending to the frame of the vessel on either side; and on each side the spaces between these beams are filled in with very strong knees carefully fitted and strongly bolted. Further aft still there are the "chocks" securely fastened. The necessity there was for all these additional beams, bolts, knees, futtochs, etc., may be judged from the fact that during the ice jam of last winter the sides of the vessel were so tightly compressed that the iron bulkhead in the engine room was buckled, the iron beam between the boilers was bent till it touched the end of one of them; and the vessel sprung a leak in four places. The work done this summer is designed to fortify the vessel against future attacks of the same kind. It has been done by Mr. Kimball Coffin, at the suggestion and under the inspection of Mr. Stoggett and Mr. Lord, and other gentlemen, who know what is required, and how, as far as possible, to meet the requirements.

For the comfort of passengers the berths and the beds have been considerably enlarged, an improvement which we are sure will be appreciated, especially by our Senators when on their way to take their part in the Councils of the Nation. The ladies cabin has also been improved by the addition of a heater. The closets for the convenience of both ladies and gentlemen have been enlarged and improved. The saloons and all the apartments have been painted and varnished.

The convenience of the steward has been studied; and a sideboard for him has been placed in a room adjoining the saloon. The cook's galley has been enlarged and shut off from direct communication with the passengers apartments, and provision has been made for its ventilation independently of other parts of the vessel.

A large tank to hold fresh water has been provided, so that the room formerly occupied by ten large water casks is now available for freight.

The boilers and engines have been thoroughly overhauled, under the careful supervision of Mr. McMillan.

In a few days the ship will proceed to Pictou and be supplied with a new screw of gun metal.

The Northern Light will then be in first-rate order. Everything that can be done has been done to meet the requirements of a winter steamer. She has been strengthened and improved in every possible way; and we think Mr. Lord deserves great credit for the good judgment and care he has displayed with regard to her.

The Entertainment in Y. M. C. A. Hall.

ANY effort to make our long winter evening's cheerful, deserves encouragement. This encouragement was extended to the Y. M. C. A. last evening, the hall being literally packed and the entertainment a marked success. The centre of attraction was the new violin, presented to Mr. Vinnicombe by some of our citizens. It has a mellow tone, subdued rather than bold, and under the hand of its player it yielded up a true and searching sweetness. A noticeable feature in all good violins is, that they possess a strangely sensitive, almost human element, which exists in no other musical instrument. They have their separate qualities, and their peculiar characters are often unmanageable, requiring much coaxing and caressing, but ever responsive to the able, loving hand of an honoured master. Mark too, how at times these old instruments become masterful companions. They will not let the player have entirely his own way. They seem either to subdue him with their bewitching sweetness, or to make him follow, in an excited manner, their enlivening promptings. We must always treat an old violin with reverential respect; it has the stamp of ancient nobility on its face; it has the cultured tone that comes from long experience; numbers have played on it, and loved it as a second soul of their own; it has heard the applause of listening multitudes long since silent; it has been the willing interpreter of the noblest works of genius, and has sensitively re-echoed the thrill produced by its own power; age does not wither it; other instruments get battered and broken; but our friend grows riper with increasing years and can endure much hard usage, bruising and patching, before it loses its individuality; in fact, it often comes home from the patcher, better than ever, and prepared to start afresh on the even tenor of its life. Mr. Vinnicombe's efforts of last evening displayed a ripeness of tasteful executive ability sufficient to enroll him among the real professionals of his art. Mr. Earle's accompaniments were executed in his usual masterful manner; and we regret that he did not favor the audience with a solo. It is always a pleasure to listen to Mr. Earle, especially when he is seated at one of those beautiful pianos of Emerson make.

The part singing was enjoyable, and might have been made more so, if the different choirs had combined for their choruses. The vocal solos received their full meed of praise, perhaps with the exception of "The Garden of Roses," which was well sung, and deserved a fuller recognition. The readers and the reciters did their pieces in an able manner, Miss Helen Lawson gaining the enviable distinction of an encore for her reading.

It is not in the spirit of captious, carping criticism that we now proceed to point out something of incongruity in this entertainment. Our feelings had no sooner been soothed by the solemn word and touching music of an anthem, than "Tom Sawyer" must force a laugh from us by his unchurch-like behaviour. Tom's profane pranks were followed by a "Jubilee Song," which, in its southern simplicity and in its expression of most sacred sentiments, came jarring upon the feelings of those who, a few moments before, had their risible faculties fully aroused. We think that the moral behaviour displayed by the audience during the singing of that peculiar refrain, was in itself a marked witness of Christian control. We felt like falling from grace several times, and were hindered by sheer disgust alone. The piece was very well sung, the many voices blending nicely; and we hope again to hear them in some selection more suitable to such an occasion. We hope the committee will, in future, carefully exclude the sacred from the funny by dividing their programmes into parts secular and sacred.

Land League Meeting.

A regular meeting of the Charlottetown Branch of the Irish National Land League was held last night in their Hall, Queen Street. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. Several new members were initiated.

In accordance with the Constitution, the November election of officers took place, resulting as follows:

President—M. P. Hogan. First Vice-President—William McGill. Second Vice-President—P. D. Cox. Recording Secretary—Richard Walsh. Financial Secretary—Francis Curran. Corresponding Secretary—J. L. Trainor. Treasurer—Philip Coyle.

Executive Committee—Simon Bolger, P. C. Kelly, Michael Hickey, John Leahy, James W. Mullaly.

After the consideration of important business connected with the success of the League, the meeting adjourned.

RICHARD WALSH, Secy. Ch'town, Nov. 8, 1881.

A GENEROUS ACT generously performed is that of Mr. W. C. McDonald in handing to McGill University, two days ago, a check for thirty thousand dollars, being the capital of certain amounts on which he has for many years paid interest. At the beginning of each academic year, on the first day of September, and at the hour of noon, Mr. McDonald's messenger has entered the office of the bursar and laid down checks for the annual amounts he had undertaken. This was done two months since as usual. The donation of the capital now is, therefore, a present of nearly a year's interest. Mr. McDonald has given enough to meet at five per cent the bursar's interest it is intended to found. A professors chair endowed with twenty thousand dollars calculated at this rate would be worth only a thousand dollars a year. Doubtless those who have made foundations of this kind calculated at a very much higher rate, but now that the value of money is rapidly sinking it would be plain that all such foundations would need to be doubled to deserve the name. Mr. McDonald is of a Highland family resident in Prince Edward Island.—Montreal Witness.

Lord Duraven and his companion, Dr. Jennings who have lately been hunting in this (Queen's) County, were, previous to their departure, arrested at Caledonia for violation of the Game Laws, on information by Mr. Wellin ton Grimes, Warden. Owing to some formalities the proceedings were set aside. We understand, however, that new papers have been issued by Justices Harlow and Douglas and a new trial is likely to be the result.—Liverpool-N. S. Advance.

The Nihilists now threaten to prevent the coronation of the Czar unless he makes certain pecified concessions.

NEWS NOTES.

MR. EDWARD LEVY LAWSON, of the Daily Telegraph, has, it is said, purchased the Duke of Westminster's splendid residence at Cliveden for £200,000.

THE Quebec Government Railroad yields a revenue of $300,000 a year. The Joly Government was willing to lease it for $250,000. The Chapeau Government hopes to sell for $3,000,000.

THE Toronto Mail of the 4th says: Sir Charles Tupper and Mr. Collingwood Schriber leave Ottawa to-day on a tour of inspection of the Intercolonial and Prince Edward Island railways.

THE Khedive of Egypt is reported to have set at liberty last month nearly a hundred slaves that had been brought to Cairo. Among them were some sixty girls, ranging in age from ten to fifteen, most of whom had been sold by their own parents.

RIGHT HON. HUGH LAW, Attorney-General for Ireland, will succeed Lord O'Hagan, and Solicitor-General Johnson will succeed Mr. Law. When Mr. Johnson goes back for reelection in Malloy on his appointment, Patrick Egan will oppose him.

THE imports to the Dominion from Great Britain for the fiscal year ending 30th June last, were, in round numbers, $55,500,000, and from the United States, $36,700,000. The imports from Great Britain have increased by a larger percentage than from the United States.

THE London "Daily News" announces that the British Parliament will meet on or about January 19, and that one of the principal subjects which it will have to consider will be the passing of such rules for the House of Commons as will enable that body to get through the legislation now required of it.

COLONEL VOIT, Chief of Police of Quebec, has received information from London of the offer of a reward of $360 for the recovery of an oil painting nine feet by seven, of which the subject is a bull standing with cow and calf lying down, and entitled "The Monarch of the Meadows," by "T. S. Cooper, R. A., 1873," and which was cut out of its frame and stolen from No. 108, Lancaster Gate, London, on the 14th September, 1881, during the progress of a fire.

HAVING for a long time pinned their faith to the mechanical genius of Keely, the motor man, and gone down into their pockets to aid him in the work of developing his unexplainable mechanism, a number of the New York stockholders in the company have taken a bold stand for satisfaction. They have resolved to pay no more money into the company until Keely patents some of his alleged inventions, and say that if he does not patent some part of his machine within ten days they will proceed against him legally. Mr. Keely feels very much aggrieved, but declares he will not yield. He claims that the real purpose of the movement is to force him to tell the secret.

A WASHINGTON despatch of a recent date says it seems probable that President Arthur will make some pointed recommendations in his annual message with respect to the abolition of polygamy in Utah. If President Garfield had lived the strength of his administration would have been exerted for the suppression of polygamous practices in that Territory. General Arthur has already taken steps to secure impartial and complete information on the Mormon question. If congressional legislation is needed to stamp out the iniquities of Mormonism, such legislation will be asked, and whatever the executive can do to create a more healthful and decent order of things in Utah will be performed without hesitation or delay.

Sir Wilfrid Lawson (says The Kelso Chronicle) is a witty man. Of that there can be no doubt. He sometimes turns his wit against himself; but on these occasions, we presume, it is more from necessity than from choice. He is a popular Cumberland Shorthorn breeder, and at times is not averse to pay a long price for a good well-bred bull or female. At one of the Holker sales he bought at a handsome price Baron Oxford 6th 33,075 from the Duke of Devonshire. He was a good and useful bull, well bred, and left a lot of calves at Brayton; but he sickened, and while men slept, died. In the morning he was lying stark and dead when Sir Wilfrid came to the home farm. With a regretful look, the genial baronet, on the spur of the moment, struck off the following epitaph: "Here lies Baron Oxford 6th. Quiet and cool. Bred by a duke, and Bought by a fool."
