

The Focal Point Of The Coronation Ceremony In London

A preview of the coronation ceremony is given in these drawings. Left, before she is invested with the robes and regalia of office, Queen Elizabeth II sits on the coronation chair and swears to serve the law and uphold the faith. She sits in plain view of the thousands of spectators in Westminster Abbey and her pledges will be heard throughout the world. In the next photo, the Queen's hand rests on the Great Bible as she swears that her promises will be kept sacred. At this point the choir sings: "Zodak the priest." Climax of the ceremony is reached when the Archbishop of Canterbury raises St. Edward's crown high above his head and places it gently on the bowed head of the Queen. In the photo, right, the Queen, having left the coronation chair, sits on the throne to receive the pledges of allegiance from princes and peers. First of the lords to pledge himself to Prince Philip, her husband. His pledge is: "I and Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, do become your liege man of life and limb and earthly worship; and faith and truth I bear unto you to live and die against all manner of folks." He is followed by the other peers of the realm.
