Opening lead—ten of clubs.
The refinements of good play are sometimes so delicate that they almost amount to splitting hairs. Declarer, in today's deal apparently followed a perfectly normal sequence of plays, but it resulted in his going down one.

Analysis reveals the contract could have been made by a different line of play, and the question is whether or not the alternate line of play was superior.

A club was opened and South could not count eight sure winners. The best chance to get a ninth trick appeared to lie in the spades. This could occur if the adverse spades divided 3-3; also if the suit broke 4-2 when the doubleton included the jack. Declarer therefore won the club lead in his hand, cashed the K-Q of spades, entered dummy with a club, and led the ace of spades. When East failed, South now tried to establish a heart trick. That suit didn't break either, and declarer wound up a trick short.

A better method of play is for South to win the opening club lead, cash the king of spades, and then overtake the queen of spades. When it turns out that East drops the nine of spades, the ten of spades is led to force out the jack.

Declarer thus gains a spade trick, making four spade tricks instead of three, and so makes his contract.

The recommended play succeeds whenever the spades are 3-3, the intention being to continue spades. The play also works if East shows up with a J-x of spades. (In both cases a trick is lost but the contract is made.)

Thus far, South's method and the one under discussion both succeed. The advantage of the suggested line of play appears whenever East has the doubleton nine of spades. Here South's play fails, but the alternate one succeeds.

The conclusion to be drawn in comparing the two methods of play is that they stand each other off all the time except in one case, where the overtaking play proves to be superior.

Restore Pioneer Indian Mission

MORLEY, Alta. (CP)—Framed against a backdrop of foothills, a little church just off the Calgary-Banff highway recalls the great service to the Indians of its founders—Rev. George McDougall and his family, Methodist missionaries of the early west.

The church building at Morley, 50 miles west of Calgary, has been preserved as a monument to the past and an attraction to present-day tourists. It is all that remains of a once flourishing mission that at one time had about it a cluster of buildings.

Morleyville, as the mission came to be known, was established by Rev. George McDougall in the early 1870s to serve Stony Indians of that area along the Bow River valley. The founder and his son, Rev. John McDougall, had a combined mission of 70 years among the Indians.

The elder missionary died near Morleyville in a snow storm. Rev. John McDougall and his family lived there for 26 years.

ZEALOUS MISSIONARY were strong characteristics of the elder McDougall. Logs were axe-hewn for the first mission house for his family and the church, built in 1873. With the help of Andrew Sibbald, a travelling layman who had also travelled from Ontario and Manitoba to the new settlement, a crude sawmill was set up. Meanwhile, the family was quartered in "the old house, a fort a short distance north of the new settlement. In 1875 the mission was able to move into its permanent quarters. Mr. Sibbald became the province's first teacher at the school built there.

Included in the cluster of buildings were the church, school, orphanage and Mr. Sibbald's house and store. A few hundred yards north and near "the old houses" were a blacksmith shop, stables, corals and chertery.

When the CPR was put through in 1883, the settlement began to fade. The post office was moved to the south side of the river to be nearer the rail line. Eventually, the orphanage also was moved there.

Through the years, the remaining buildings crumbled. In more recent times, a United Church committee took steps to restore the

BEDTIME STORIES

The Busy Little Weaver

Happy work the whole day long,
Finds expression in a song.
—Redeye the Vireo.

Redeye the Vireo and Mrs. Redeye were a little late in starting their nest. This was because Mrs. Redeye was a little late in getting back from the Land-of-always-Summer. Now the two little feathered folks were trying to catch up. Mrs. Redeye is very particular about her nest. It must be good. She is never guilty of just throwing things together, which is the way some nests seem to have been made.

"Of course I'll do that," declared Redeye.

So it was that the nest wasn't quite finished when there were four eggs in it and Mrs. Redeye began sitting on them to keep them warm. It was only the edges of the nest that were not finished and she could work on these while she sat on the eggs. This she did. Redeye would sit close at hand watching her and singing to her. Then he would hurry away to look for more material, but he didn't stop singing. Mrs. Redeye always knew just where he was by his voice.

Returning from the Old Orchard where he had been looking for some material Redeye brought a bit of news. "Cousin Warbler is over in the Old Orchard," said he. "I heard him singing and looked him up. Warbler has a nest over there. He warned me to watch out for Sally Sly. It seems she has been getting into mischief over there. She has made a lot of trouble."

Cousin Warbler is another member of the Vireo family. He, too, is a good singer and is known as the Warbling Vireo. In some ways he is a better singer than Cousin Redeye, but he doesn't sing quite so much, not all day long as does

Approve N. B. Limestone Grit For Poultry

"New Brunswick marble limestone grit continues to give satisfactory results when fed to the poultry flock at the Experimental Farm, Fredericton," states a further report by the Dominion Experimental Farm, Fredericton, N. B., dated May 29, 1957, signed by Leonard Griesbach, Agricultural Research Officer (Poultry).

"In 1956, a feed trial was conducted comparing this product with imported insoluble grit and oyster shell, as a source of calcium and grit for the laying flock. The results indicated that the lower priced home produced was satisfactory for this purpose. The entire laying flock at the Experimental Farm has received this limestone grit exclusively, as a source of both calcium and grit, since September, 1956.

"Specific gravity tests taken in May 2 and May 3, 1957, show that egg shell strength is even greater than it was in May, 1956. The birds at that time had been receiving insoluble grit and oyster shell during the previous winter. This is further proof of the value of the limestone grit for egg shell quality.

"The question came up as to whether this limestone grit would promote as good feed efficiency, where whole grains are included in the ration, as would insoluble grit. Work done at various institutions indicates that grit of some sort in a hen's diet is desirable. A summary of all results published in the literature indicates that there would be little, if any, difference between marble limestone and insoluble grit in regard to their effect on food efficiency. Observation indicates also, that there would be no difference in this respect because even though marble limestone grit dissolves slowly in a hen's digestive system, examination of gizzards shows them to contain a plentiful supply of grit.

"Further information on the effect of grit on feed efficiency will be forthcoming. In the meantime, there should be no hesitation to use a high quality marble limestone product as grit, as well as a source of calcium for laying hens."

Two C. B. Men Die After Accidents

SYDNEY (CP)—Two Cape Breton men died Thursday as a result of separate accidents.

Alex J. Campbell, 70, of the Inverness County village of West Bay Points, died in hospital here from complications that followed an accident a week ago. He crushed his foot while working on the highway.

Harold Purdy, 66-year-old steelworker died in hospital from burns suffered in an accident at the plant April 4. He was burned when cleaning fluid ignited, setting fire to his clothes.

through either retirement or deaths at the polls.

In addition, 13 others qualified for partial pensions after serving in more than two Parliaments but less than the period required for the full superannuation. To get a full pension members have to have served only a few months short of 17 years.

Among the latter is Bona Arsenault, Liberal defeated in Bonaventure, an insurance executive who master-minded the pension plan several years ago.

FULL PENSION FOR HOWE

The list of full pensioners provided they apply for the payments includes four cabinet ministers who were defeated at the polls: Trade Minister Howe, who announced Thursday his retirement from politics, Finance Minister Harris, Revenue Minister McCann and Veterans Minister Lapointe.

It also includes three defeated parliamentary assistants, J. Watson MacNaught, fisheries; Robert McCubbin, agriculture; and Gib Weir, Liberal whip and parliamentary assistant to Prime Minister St. Laurent.

Two defeated cabinet ministers — Justice Minister Garson, 1948, and Works Minister Winters, 1945

P. C. Party Made Substantial Gains In Province Of Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — The Progressive Conservative party doubled its parliamentary representation in last Monday's federal elections and sharply reduced the Liberal majorities of 1953 in many other ridings.

The PC party won eight seats, scoring six upsets and retaining two of the four seats it won four years ago. Liberal representation dropped to 62 from 66. Election of independents of various types made up the remainder of Quebec's total representation of 75.

Latest figures on Monday's election show the Liberals with 975, 121 votes or 57 per cent; the PCs with 528,367, or 41 per cent.

In the 1953 election the Liberals had 943,071 of the popular vote or 61 per cent. The progressive Conservatives had only 29.4 per cent with 454,072.

Approximately 71 per cent of Quebec's eligible voters cast ballots Monday, compared with 66 per cent in the 1953 elections. As in 1953 the Liberals had a —also became entitled to part pensions.

State Secretary Pinard became eligible for partial pension through retirement. But Mines Minister Frudham, who also retired, and Defence Minister Campney and Associate Defence Minister Hell-year, both defeated, are not eligible.

CONTRIBUTE $200 YEARLY

The pensions may take a big chunk out of the superannuation fund, to which MPs contribute $240 a year or six per cent of the first $4,000 of their $8,000-a-year parliamentary indemnity. Their contributions are matched by federal treasury payments.

Other MPs qualifying for $3,000 a year after election defeats are: Clarie Gillis (CCF—Cape Breton South), Ralph Kirk (L—Antigonish-Guysborough), Gordon T. Purdy (L—Colchester—Hants), Paul E. Gagnon (Ind—Chicoutimi) and Armand Cloutier (L—Drummond-Arthabaska).

Three MPs who retired from politics this year—Angus MacInnis (CCF—Vancouver Kingsway), G. J. Tustin (PC—Prince Edward-Lennox) and Murray Clark (L—Essex South)—also are fully pensionable.

full slate of 75 candidates. The PCs nominated 68, exclusive of an Independent Progressive Conservative who won, compared with 72 in 1953.

The cut in Liberal winning majorities, compared with 1953, was seen in all parts of the province. In a few instances the Liberals increased their majorities.

Total Liberal majorities in the 21 Montreal constituencies in 1953 were 182,500. Last Monday they were approximately 163,800.

In four Quebec ridings total Liberal majorities were cut to 36,400 from 40,800.

In 18 scattered rural constituencies Liberal majorities dropped to 49,200 from 78,400.

The Progressive Conservative majority in two Montreal ridings was 7,800, compared with 1,100 in one victory in 1953. The increase in this one riding—Notre Dame de Grace—was 6,500. A 1953 Liberal win by 10,400 in Montreal Jacques-Cartier-Lasalle riding was turned into a Progressive Conservative victory by about 200 majority.
