HAVE A GUESS.

Oh, wheelmen, all take my advice,
And don't forget, be sure
To take a look at the famous "Bike"
In PROWSE'S well-known Store.

The handsome Brantford Bicycle
That in their window's shown
Is as good as any in Charlottetown,
And it may be your own.

A jar in which are cents galore
Is placed where all can see;
Guess how many cents the jar contains
And the "Bike" your own will be.

Be wise, make all your purchases
At PROWSE'S Clothing Store;
Each purchase, on that Bicycle,
Will give you one chance more.

Their Carpets, Hats and Furnishings,
And all, in fact, they keep,
Compared with others in the town
Are more than quite as cheap.

"She Looketh Well

to the ways of her household." Yes, Solomon is right; that's what the good housekeeper everywhere does, but particularly in Canada.

But her ways are not always old ways. In fact she has discarded many unsatisfactory old ways. For instance, to-day she is using the New Shortening, instead of lard. And this is in itself a reason why "she looketh well" in another sense, for she eats no lard to cause poor digestion and a worse complexion.

Cottolene

COTTOLINE is much better than lard for all cooking purposes, as every one who has tried it declares. Have you tried it?

SMALL OBLIGATIONS.

A WARPED MORALITY IS THE RESULT OF LAXITY.

Carelessness in Paying What One Owes Very Often Causes Inconvenience, Embarrassment and Even Misery—Avoid Debt as You Would Disgrace.

Few women, let us hope, are intentionally dishonest. The majority of women are fastidious in the conduct of their finances, shrinking from debt as from disgrace, and preferring to pay fully and honorably as they go. Yet, now and then one hears a wail of complaint from people who suffer needlessly because of the heedless manner in which other people keep them waiting for money which they have earned. A dressmaker said, recently, to one of her patrons: "I am nearly frantic when I think how hard I worked and how late I sat up to finish Miss ——'s graduation gown, and now I am afraid I will never be paid. I have waited six months for that bill, and I cannot get one cent, though I have almost begged for it, even offering to take it in instalments. I am distressed in these hard times, when everybody is retrenching, because people do not have so many new things, and others who have had them put off paying me."

On her way home the sympathetic customer thought about it, happening to know that there were no indications of want or strained means in the family of the delinquent debtor, inferring that the thing was due to an ingrained indifference to paying for work when done. Probably there was at first a temporary inconvenience in settling the bill, and it was postponed for a day or two, and then the period lengthened insensibly, other creditors brought their bills, large amounts were paid, and still the poor dressmaker waited and wondered, and grew frantic with worry, poor thing?

To defer even for one day the paying of the laundress who has acceptably finished her day's work in your kitchen is, it may be, to force her to ask credit, grudgingly given to such as she, at the grocer's shop where she deals, or else to send her children meagerly fed to their beds. People who have a comfortable balance in bank do not comprehend the strained circumstances of the people who live from hand to mouth.

Coal-bins filled to the overflow are a different thing from coal purchased in the dearest way, by the pailful at a time, yet thousands of poor women can buy their coal only in very small quantities or go without. Think of being calmly told to wait till to-morrow for one's wages, when neither stick of wood nor ounce of coal was on hand for the family fire!

Apart from the inconvenience, embarrassment, and misery entailed by laxity in paying what one owes, especially when the creditors are the poor, and the debts are small, there is evident a serious lack of principle in persons who can comfortably continue in debt.

Any lapse in the rigid honor which insists on meeting each demand and paying it in full at the moment of its maturity involves a loss of self respect, and brings in its train a warped morality.

There are few things more important in the education of children than the fostering in them the right estimate of personal obligation. The child should be enjoined against borrowing and begging in his small transactions. Let him be held to strict account and responsibility as to his management of his allowance. Fidelity here will tell in years to come, when his dealings are no longer small, but affect great commercial interests.—Harper's Bazar.

The Patent Medicine Habit.

"The cologne habit is rather common, especially among women, the Jamaica ginger habit is heard from occasionally, and cases of even the vinegar habit are reported once in a awhile. But I can tell you of one that is more absurd, and yet much more common." The speaker was a Buffalo druggist.

"What is it?"

"It's the patent medicine habit. Men have it a little oftener than woman, and one rarely recovers from it, so far as my observation goes. Try one kind of patent medicine and that's all right. Try another kind and maybe that's all right. Try a third and you're a goner. In all my experience of many years I never knew of a person who had tried three different patent remedies, one right after the other, who had not by that time become a confirmed patent medicine fiend, given to reading newspaper advertisements in search of new remedies and diseases to fit them. In time the habit wipes out its victim, same as morphine or drink would. It is a fact, though—I speak as a friend and not as a druggist—that a few of the patent medicines really contain valuable ingredients and effect wonderful cures. They are carefully prepared on a scientific basis, but most of them are frauds, containing cheap, harmless, useless drugs, and sold at high prices. But people insist on buying them, and we have to sell them. What is more, some insist on being cured by them, whereas they wouldn't be helped a bit if they knew what the medicine was made of. That's patent faith cure."—Buffalo Express.

A Princess' Accomplishment.

The Princess of Wales has one accomplishment which has commended her warmly to her royal father. He says with pride that she can concoct a more tempting Welsh rarebit than any other woman in England. She is an excellent housekeeper and her mother's right hand in such household management as falls to the lot of Her Royal Highness.

Baker to the Queen.

There is at Perth, in Scotland, an old woman who might use the sign "Baker to the Queen" in a much more literal sense than those dignified words usually have. She can make shortbread to Her Majesty's liking, and no one else can. Consequently, 365 days in the year she makes, bakes, packs and sends to the Queen a loaf of that dainty.

Boarding-House Item.

"Did you notice how our new boarder is always looking lovingly at me at the dinner table," said the landlady's daughter to her mother.

"Yes; I noticed how he winks at you when you are cutting the pie. He is hinting for a big piece.

A Suitable Epitaph.

It is related that a chronic office-seeker died a few years ago, and his friends asked a well-known journalist for an epitaph for his tombstone. The journalist suggested the following, which was not, however, adopted: "Here lies John Jones in the only place for which he never applied!"

ONE OF THE LOST TRIBES.

Hebrew and Hawaiian Burial Customs Correspond Exactly.

The manner of disposing of the dead in the Hawaiian Islands is also in accord with the Hebrew custom. The body was embalmed and covered with a glutinous substance or wash, to seal effectually the pores of the skin and exclude all air. The body was then deposited in the side of a precipice. The practice of immolating one or more wives of a chief was carried on to a considerable extent in the Hawaiian group in earlier days. As a manifestation of love and attachment, the wives of a chief would voluntarily die, which act was called moe-pu, companionship in sleep. This practice can be traced to the Vedic Hindoos, the only difference being that the wife was immolated on the funeral pyre. Some stress has been laid on the peculiar institutions, called cities of refuge, or Punhonua, which were found to have obtained prominence among the Hawaiians, and which have been quoted as another instance of Hebrew influence upon the custom and culture of the islanders. The cities of refuge, however, were not peculiar to the Hebrews. They existed in the time of ancient Greece. We read of the temple of Ceres, at Hermione, in Argolis, which was a similar institution, and there were numerous others, both there and elsewhere, where the Cushite influence had modified the customs and molded the curts of the people on its own pattern.

Besides the traditions of the Hawaiians, their practice of incantation and divination, and many peculiarties of their language show a relation not only with the Hebrews, but also with the fire-worshippers of Persia, the Brahmins and Buddhists of India, and other branches of the Ayran race.—Abraham Fornander, in April Lippincott's.

Home of the Ostrich.

Southern Africa contains a sufficient number of large ostrich farms to keep the whole world supplied with feathers. The ostrich farming commenced in California has not proven a success thus far. Cape Town, Africa, is the largest depot in the world for ostrich feathers. Many large houses in England are represented there by agents who ship these goods to London, where they are sold at auction every two months to buyers from all countries. No imitation of the ostrich feather has ever been found, though years ago dealers unsuccessfully experimented with the plumage of the vulture for this purpose. The Egyptian feathers are the most valuable, costing sometimes four hundred dollars a pound, but such feathers last a lifetime, and will stand any amount of curling, cleaning and dyeing. The plumes are classed under the names of wild, tame, male, female, white, black, drab and byacks. They are cut from the quill stubs, which the birds shed afterward, and tied in bunches of from eight to fifty feathers, the tail feathers predominating. The wild birds are rare, and the feathers very fine and the flue of a high lustre. Byacks are of mixed shades, and the male plumage surpasses the female. The value of a feather becomes lesser or greater after cleaning it with white Castile soap, according to the quality of the flues. An ostrich feather is a colony of feathers rather than one, as may be seen by separating each flue of barbule, each being perfect in itself. Ostriches are full grown at two years, when the female selects her mate and remains constant to him as long as they both live. Ten feet high, to the top of the head, is the ordinary size.—Home Journal.

Science Notes.

Japan has one of the best engineering schools in the world, and is beginning to manufacture creditable electrical machinery.

Petroleum, by a course of experiments made by the Prussian government, has proven a reliable scale preventer in steam boilers.

A comparison of the cost of gas and electric lighting in seven German cities shows that the latter is from twenty-five to seventy-five per cent higher.

The Indian government is building a laboratory at Calcutta to thoroughly investigate the properties of snake venom and test cures for snake bites.

Zoologists claim that the strength of the lion in the fore limbs is only sixty-nine per cent of that of the tiger, and the strength of the hind limbs sixty-five per cent.

A series of experiments is to be made at Yale college to determine the relation of the nerves to the muscles of the human body and test a theory that strength depends less upon the size of the muscle than upon the strength of the nerve.

It is maintained very stoutly by expert electricians that the storage battery, is after all, a success for commercial work; that the new process for manufacturing them have cheapened their cost and that in train lighting they are especially efficient and economical. It is estimated that $85 per horse power is the annual cost of the accumulator.—Inventive Age.

Paderewski's Daily Life.

Paderewski knows Shakespeare from cover to cover. He has a beautiful home in Paris, though his family consists only of a son, who is 13 years old. Of this boy he is passionately fond. He does not, however, take him with him on his tours. The boy remains at home with his tutor. Paderewski never signs an agreement, and he has never failed to keep an engagement except through serious illness. Among those who have been connected with him in a business capacity Paderewski's word is as good as his bond. His mail is generally of enormous proportions. A large proportion of it consists of begging letters.

French and American Women.

Mr. Max O'Rell says he has found only two nations where women are the leaders, France and America. In America, from the age of eighteen, a girl is allowed almost every liberty—she takes the rest. In France the women are not frivolous, he maintains, as is commonly supposed. They have a knowledge of their husband's business and a voice in the management of his affairs.

Horse Strength and Pavements.

A horse can draw on metal rails one and two-third times as much as on asphalt pavement, three and one-third times as much as on good Belgian blocks, five times as much as on good cobble-stones, twenty times as much as on good earth road and forty times as much as on sand.

An Interesting Garden.

Lady Brooke has a Shakespearean garden at Warwick Castle, containing nearly every flower named in Shakespeare's works.

Egyptian.

Egyptian monuments represent hats in nearly the shape of the Mexican sombrero.

Priestley's Cravenettes may be had in all the newest fabrics. Absolutely rain-repelling they are not to be distinguished from the same goods not waterproofed. This is their great merit. Cravenette includes serges and all dress fabrics. They are perfectly porous, non-odorous, and they never change in appearance. These are merits which no other waterproofing process has been able to demonstrate. They are rolled on "The Varnished Board" like all Priestley's dress goods.
