TRAIN WARNINGS.—C. G. R. artisans are busy at Kensington installing at the Malpeque Crossing a signal system, whose purpose is to give due warning of approach of trains. The point of contact with the apparatus that gives tongue to the bell will be 500 feet east of this crossing, giving all ample time to remove to safe distance from the crossing, before the entry of trains. It will be recalled by readers of The Guardian (and who does not read the Guardian?) how fatal accidents have occurred here owing to the impossibility of trainmen being able to see this crossing until almost upon it, or drivers of teams or pedestrians to see the train until it is within 200 feet of the crossing, the angle of observation being drawn sharply acute by the intersection of buildings close to the track at this sharp curve. Were it not for the incessant vigilance of trainmen, more accidents than have been recorded would have occurred at this point. The citizens and others duly appreciate this service that the railway is installing. No doubt this will be followed over the long-sought improvement in the lighting system. Kerosene lamps are still used, although Kensington enjoys the superior advantage of an electric light plant. No human power is able to keep those from smoking on very windy nights, and thus the lustre the light sheds upon utility is of a dusky nature. The people are confident that something better will be furnished before the dark nights and late trains of the advancing season will be upon us. Then will the gratitude of the supporters of the system be heard expressed in terms of adequate appreciation. Y.

LONDON—PARIS EXPRESS PLANES ARE NO WMORE LUXURIOUS THAN EVER.

LONDON, June 28.—The airways are steadily developing smoother and more luxurious travel as the railways did, but at a much faster rate. The latest thing in the Paris service is the new type of Handley-Page saloon express, two of which went off from Croydon recently after being christened by Gen. Bracker as his first performance as Director of Civil Aviation.

Instead of smashing the bottle of champagne against the fragile side of the aeroplane, Gen. Bracker knocked the neck off the bottle with a hammer and splashed the froth against a strip of paper which concealed the names, Princess Mary and "Prince George."

The new machines carry twelve passengers—four more than is usual at present—and 500 pounds of baggage. They weigh five and a half tons when fully loaded and have an average cruising speed of ninety miles.

The passengers can move about inside and each one has his own window, which can be opened. The machines are fitted with the wireless telephone and travelers can telephone to London on the way by handing their messages to the pilot. The accommodation generally is that of a first class railway carriage, with racks for light luggage. Six more of the same type are being built.

Fast passenger aeroplanes between Paris and Cherbourg will now run in conjunction with the ocean services. The Cunard Steamship Company has arranged, as from June 1, with the Messageries Aeriennes Francaise for an aeroplane service to connect with the arrival and departure of the express Cunarders calling at the French port.

By using the air service passengers will save at least five hours in a journey to and from the French capital.

In the case of passengers arriving from New York, on landing at Cherbourg they will join a waiting motor car and proceed to the aerodrome from which place they will fly direct to Paris. Outward-bound passengers can arrange for an aerodrome motor car to call for them at their hotel. Passengers can take a certain amount of baggage.

But the Battery is Jucier First Electrician—Why is a brick a better worker than a storage battery? Second Electrician—That's easy; a brick is only fired once and a storage battery is discharged a great many times.—Science and Invention.

Farewell To Canada

Under a scorching sun the Buildings of Charlottetown fade from view. The ship slides down the quay to the Harbour. Already the broad open sea of Northumberland Straits glistens before her. Good bye most beautiful of modern cities. Good bye to glimmering spires dream like as the Castles and Cathedrals of a romantic vision. Good bye to their films of smoke that issue from furnaces and flit in dissolving wreaths. Good bye to heaven pilled offices so clean, so warm, where lovely stenographers with silk stockings and powdered faces sit leisurely at work or converse in charming ease. Good bye Canada I am going home. I am going to an ancient village of mean and mouldering roads not fit for mankind extended over many miles of grimy mud and burning sand clinging closer than a blanket of smudgy girls who know little of powder and less of charming ease and leisure. Good bye Canada I am going home. Good bye to beautiful apartments and homes. Good bye to windows looking far out over the city. Good bye to central heating and radiators, flt symbols of hearts they warm. Good bye to frequent and well appointed bathrooms glory of the plumbers art. Good bye to shady verandahs where rocking chairs stand in rows ready for reading the papers. Good bye Canada I am going home. I am going to a land where every man's house is a prison, a land of open stairs and chilly rooms of ice and snow and flies where people sit aloof and see no reason to make themselves seaisick. Good bye Canada I am going home. Good bye to copious meals the grape fruit, the eggs broken in a glass, to oysters large and small to celery and olives besides the soup to the thick wedge of apple pie, the slab of ice cream to the home brew. I am going to the land of salt meat and fish, of solid puddings and violent tea, where oysters are good for fools alone, where cream is seldom seen. Good bye Canada I am going home. Good bye to many friends. I have made in your beautiful cities old and young, ladies and gentlemen. Good bye to your sweet smiles and cheery words, to your flowers and streets, to your churches and stores. Good bye Charlottetown I am going home. Good bye to the dear old Constance that dear old ship to her Captain and Officers, Stewards, Steward and Crew. Good bye Constance I am going home. Good bye to Pictou the land of ban where strangers say glad to meet you sir and really seem glad. I am going to a land of ancient speech where we still say dat for that and herd for heard. Good bye Canada I am going home. Sir:—Would you allow me space in your valuable paper for the enclosed. If possible if you can manage to read it, I am leaving Canada after spending a glorious time, leaving never to return. I am sailing for the Labrador where probably I shall spend my days. But will always have pleasant memories of Canada especially of Charlottetown. Thanking you in anticipation of your favour I am Sir, etc. JOHN C. BARNEY, Hansie An Loup Labrador, Province of Nfld. P. S.—This farewell is in the striking form recently adopted by correspondent of the Manchester Guardian on leaving New York.—Ed. G.
