

FLOWERS.

The flowers are blooming everywhere,
On every hill and dell;
And oh, how beautiful they are!
How sweetly too they smell!

The little birds they spring along,
And look so glad and gay;
I love to hear their pleasant song—
I feel as glad as they.

The young lambs bleat and frisk about;
The bees hum round their hive;
The butterflies are coming out:
'Tis good to be alive!

The trees that look so stiff and grey,
With green leaves now are hung;
Oh, mother! let me laugh and play—
I cannot hold my tongue.

See, yonder bird spreads out his wings,
And mounts the clear blue skies;
And hark, how merrily he sings,
As far away he flies.

"Go forth, my child, and laugh and play,
And let your cheerful voice
With birds, and brooks, and merry May,
Cry out, Rejoice, rejoice!

"I would not check your bounding mirth,
My happy little boy;
For He who made this blooming earth
Smiles on an infant's joy."

The Queen's Family.

To but few women it is given to hold in their arms the grandchildren of their own daughters; but time has been moving apace during the last half century, and in the natural course of events the little Princess of Saxe-Meiningen is not the only great grandchildren her Majesty is likely to welcome. Prince Frederick William of Prussia, the Queen's eldest grandson, is in his twenty-first year, and Prince Albert Victoria is in his sixteenth year. In September last, before the sad calamity that befell the House of Hesse-Darmstadt her Majesty had no fewer than thirty grandchildren. One daughter and one son still remain unmarried; but Prince Leopold is now in his twenty-seventh year, and the Princess Beatrice in her twenty-third, and, without any wish to anticipate the future, it may safely be conjectured that neither will much longer remain single. Her subjects do not need to be reminded of the example the Queen has set as a wife and a mother. The happy inner life of the royal house was well known long before the royal diary was published, or the life of the late Prince Consort given to the world. But it is yet difficult to fully realize how completely happy and undisturbed has been the course of events in her Majesty's family, and how unceasing has been her care and love. Of nine children she has lost but one, and the Princesses who have left Britain have been as popular among their new subjects, and are as dearly beloved by them, as are the brothers and sisters they have left in the Island of their birth. The little Princess who has just seen the light in Germany by two generations; but her birth will none the less be as welcome in Britain as in Saxony itself. The British royal house is now allied by marriage, in the persons of her Majesty's sons and daughters, to the reigning houses of Russia, Germany and Denmark, and, as time moves, other such alliances must follow, in the next generation at any rate, if not in the present. Even if we are not among those who hold that royal unions do much to alter the course of history, or to consolidate the peace of Europe, we can yet be sure that they are not altogether without their influence—an influence which happily has of late been generally wisely exercised.

The dining room of the Metropolitan Hotel, New York, was damaged by fire the other day to the extent of $60,000. Nine immense mirrors on the walls, the cost of which was $33,000, were injured, four of them being wholly destroyed.

Collapse of a Balloon in Mid-Air.

One of the most extraordinary escapes from death ever recorded occurred on Easter Monday to an aeronaut named L'Estrange. In the presence of thousands of spectators, he made an ascent from the Agricultural Grounds, on the St. Kilda-road, in the balloon Aurora—the same, it is said, which was used to convey despatches during the Franco-Prussian war. When the balloon had attained the great altitude of a mile and three-quarters, it suddenly collapsed, the gas bursting through its side, but the parachute came into play, and, instead of the wreck falling like a stone, it came down in a zig-zag course, and finally struck a tree in the Government Domain, thus breaking the fall, and L'Estrange reached the ground, half stunned, but alive. The excitement when the balloon came down was intense. Women screamed and fainted, some fell on their knees with their hands clasped in prayer, while hundreds of men rushed into the Government Domain, expecting to find a mangled body, but to their astonishment they discovered L'Estrange alive. L'Estrange is a good deal bruised and he has sprained his right arm, but he is in high spirits, and talks of making another ascent.—Melbourne Argus.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy CURES CATARRH.

Hear what a Reverend Gentleman says of the Constitutional Remedy.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., Brockville, Ont.:—"DEAR SIR—It is now two years since your 'Constitutional Catarrh Remedy' was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be 'too good to be true.'"

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long. I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your agent came to Walkertown in August, 1876, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head. A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,
W. TINDALL, Methodist Minister.
