Navy Decline Is Charged

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, Eng. (Reuters) — Lord Winstler, former cabinet minister, charged Thursday that First Sea Lord Louis Earl Mountbatten has allowed the Royal Navy to decline seriously in the last four years. Winstler, president of the Merchant Navy and Airline Officers Association, declared that there has been a "serious diminution" in the navy's strength since Mountbatten took charge in April, 1955.

Opening lead—king on spades. This hand was played last year in a team of four match in England. The story of what occurred many seem incredible, but nevertheless it happened.

South was an adventurer who liked to bid psychics. He was unable to resist the urge to open the bidding with a spade.

West, though he had doubts that this contract could be made, passed to await developments. For takedown.

South ran to two clubs, fearing that one spade doubled would be left in. West doubled two clubs and that became the final contract.

The king of spades was led. East playing the six. West shifted

Sykora Gets Two Doctors' Degree

By DEREK CASSELS

MONTREAL (CP)—Tall ranging Oscar Sykora, to be freshly capped this morning as one of Canada's newest dentists, will race across town in the afternoon to become an even newer doctor of philosophy.

For in the one day two universities will cap the 29-year-old student.

It is the first time anyone can

Bomarc Chain Is Envisioned

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Pearekes told a Senate committee Thursday that there will be "very shortly" a chain of Bomarc anti-aircraft missile stations across North America.

A few hours later, the United States House of Representatives appropriations committee disclosed it had voted to cut $162,700,000 out of the Bomarc procurement program. The committee said it isn't convinced the Bomarc system will work.

There was no immediate indication of how the committee's action will affect the Canadian defence program. This country is scheduled to get the Bomarc-B in 1961 while the U.S. committee dealt with procurement of the shorter-range Bomarc-A.

In reply to a question in the Commons Tuesday, Mr. Pearekes said: "In my opinion the facts do not warrant any uncertainty as to the effectiveness or future use of the Bomarc ground-to-air missile."

Mr. Pearekes said Thursday before the Senate external relations committee that "any attack on North America with the equipment the Russians are known to have now would be defeated."

"I don't mean that a few bombers might not get through but the attack would be so costly it would be considered a complete failure."

At the moment, there was no defence against the Inter Continental Ballistic Missile but the U.S. Nike-Zeus anti-missile system "will be operational in the near future."

La. Mr. Pearekes qualified this by saying that the Nike-Zeus will be the first counter-missile "likely" to come into operation.
