POTATO CROP.

Poor Outlook in the United States.

The potato crop has been a partial failure this year, and it will probably be necessary to draw supplies from European countries. Prices will certainly be high this winter, as the yield in many important States is very small.

The following despatch received last week from Middletown, N. Y., gives some idea how discouraged farmers feel in some sections: "Farmers in Orange and Sullivan Counties are alarmed at the condition of their potato crop, and predict a potato famine. The tubers are rotting as soon as dug, and in some cases growers have already suffered the loss of two-thirds of their crop, while the remainder is of an inferior quality, showing evidence of decay. Several farmers who commenced to dig their potatoes have abandoned the work, declaring that not enough sound ones can be found to pay the expense of harvesting." From the advices received it is thought the conditions will show a further decline by October 1, particularly in this State. This week's weekly crop bulletin for New York State contains the following relative to potatoes:

Broome County—"Potatoes rotting badly."
Chautauqua County (Cherry Creek)—"Potatoes continue to rot after being dug."
Jamestown—"The dry weather has enabled farmers to finish up their delayed work, and has in a large degree stopped the potato rot."
(Poland Centre)—"Potato digging begun; slight yield and much rot."
(Dunkirk)—"Late potatoes feeling the effects of the dry weather."
Jefferson County (Adams Centre)—"Potatoes improving."
(Carthage)—"Potatoes rotting."

John A. McLean, aged two years and three months, son of Hon. James R. McLean died suddenly at Souris yesterday of inflammation. The funeral will take place tomorrow at 9 o'clock.

Assault case of Burke vs. Brown. The case of Wm. Burke appeared before Michael McCormack and R. F. McDonald yesterday. Burke was charged with assaulting Peter Brown and doing him bodily harm. From the evidence it appears that Brown is not yet out of danger from the effects of the assault which was reported in Wednesday's EXAMINER. The defendant was sent to Georgetown to stand trial in the Supreme Court. In the course of the evidence it appeared that Burke resisted arrest with an iron bar, and that he had also beaten Mr. McKay, a carriage builder at Dundas, and an old man named James Aitken. Mr. A. Mellich appeared for the prosecution.
