LOVE FINDS A WAY.

BY JEANNETTE H. WALWORTH.

(COPYRIGHT 1899 BY JEANNETTE H. WALWORTH.)

(CONCLUDED.)

"Blabbering about? Well, upon my word and honor! Yes, I did say poor, but I wasn't talking about myself. Oh—she—would never let me lack for anything. She is as good as an own daughter to me."

"She?"

"M-mh!"

"I suppose you mean Olivia by 'she'?"

"Thank goodness, at last!"

She looked at him radiantly and pocketed her big handkerchief with a triumphant flourish. Tom looked perplexed in his turn.

"Thank goodness for what?"

"You will bear me witness, Tom, you did it—I didn't."

"I'll bear you witness to anything," said Tom, with a great laugh, "if you'll only be a little more lucid."

"Ollie said I wasn't on any terms to bring her name into the conversation unless you mentioned it first, and I began to think you never would do it."

A cloud settled on Tom's bright face.

"But why—why should we not mention her name? Does she suppose that I am going through life with bayonet set to run amuck of any man or woman who mentions Clarence Westover's wife in my presence? I have accepted the inevitable."

"Oh, my! Well, I just do. I care—I just must—I am dying to—I'm going to—"

While Miss Malvina held this spasmodic colloquy with conscience in audible jerks Tom watched her anxiously. Was "Mother" Spillman's "queerness" going to descend upon her daughter?

"Tom, dear, if anything pleasanter than the 'inevitable' should be offered for your acceptance, would you embrace it?"

He knitted his brows comically.

"How very mysterious you are, Miss Vinie!"

"Wouldn't you—don't you know Ollie is not Clarence Westover's wife? Don't you know she's just been daft ever since she heard you were hurt?"

He turned very pale, but seated himself by her side before making any sort of reply. He had perfect control of himself when he answered:

"No; I had not heard anything. You see, I have been very much cut off from my old acquaintances out here. Where—is—she, then? You said you did not leave her on the other side of the water."

"She's down stairs."

"Down stairs?" He bounded to his feet, then stopped irresolutely.

Miss Malvina laughed fretfully and gave him a little shove.

"Mercy on me! What betwixt you and Olivia I feel as if I was trying to work two mechanical toys with all their machinery out of order. It's a jerk forward and a jerk backward. Please go down stairs, Tom, and have it all out with Ollie one way or the other. Take my word for it, she loves you dearly."

And there were no more backward jerks on his part to complain of. When he entered the dark, stuffy parlor, he could scarcely discern the slim figure seated in its farthest corner. He still limped slightly from his accident, but his progress was reasonably rapid.

"Ollie!" He stretched out his hands eagerly. "My little friend! Why I thought you were on the other side of the ocean!"

Her hands were in his, and she was looking up at him with a light in her eyes that fairly illuminated the obscurity for him.

"And I thought you were in a sick-bed with broken legs and things, and I expected to kneel down by your bedside and whisper all sorts of contrite and comforting things into your poor ears, and here you are strong and well and bigger than ever!"

"I am very sorry," said Tom meekly, and then they both laughed. Still holding her hands in his, he drew her to a sofa by a window.

"So am I," said Ollie, catching her breath as one does when about to take a daring plunge, "for it makes it harder for me to say what I have come all the way back from Nice to say. But perhaps you don't want me to say anything at all."

"The very sound of your dear voice brings healing with it, Ollie."

"Then—then—oh, Tom, it's perfectly horrid of you to make me say it! But I deserve some sort of punishment. Did you think I asked you to take me—just because I was sorry for you? Did not you know I—I love you?"

"You know, Tom, I've always loved you? No. You poor dear, how could you when I only found it out myself that day after you got up and went from me without once looking back? You see, Tom, you treated me too well at first. But—but—if you love me, Tom, it will all come right at last. I said 'No' to you once when I did not know my own mind, and you said 'No' to me when you wanted to punish me for being such a frivolous weathercock. I did a silly thing, Tom, and you did—a cruel one. But all the world knows, Tom, that two negatives make an affirmative—that is, you know, dear, where they really and truly love each other. If you love me, Tom—"

"If I love you? Ollie, my own little Olivia, at last! Your image has never grown dim in my faithful heart. You are the one thing in life that I have longed for with a longing unappeasable and unutterable. All things else I have said I would have. You alone were the unattainable through force of will. The supreme good of my life had to come to me as a free gift from this beloved little hand."

And a golden silence fell between them.

When Clarence Westover, then wintering in Florida with his handsome Clementine, read in the Maudville papers that Thomas Broxton and Olivia Matthews had been quietly married at the home of the bride and immediately removed to their future residence, Broxton Hall, he laughed and rolled the paper up to mail to Jeanne. On its margin he wrote:

It was Tom, and not me, she cared for all along, only it took her a phenomenally long time to make the discovery. Love has found the way to make good all losses to splendid Tom Broxton.

THE END.

The Continuous Shows.

The funniest farce ever written could not be done at vaudeville houses if it had any of the earmarks of the thing in vogue at many of our first class theaters. Said a lady to me:

"They (the vaudeville theaters) are the only theaters in New York where I should feel absolutely safe in taking a young girl without making preliminary inquiries. Though they may offend the taste, they never offend one's sense of decency." The vaudeville theaters may be said to have established the commercial value of decency. This is their cornerstone. They were conceived with the object of catering to ladies and children, and, strange to say, a large, if not the larger, part of their audiences is always men.—"Vaudeville Theater," by Edwin Milton Royle, in Scribner's.

Horse Weighed 3,000 Pounds.

The weight of the heaviest horse ever known was 3,000 pounds. This Clydesdale horse was exhibited in New York in 1889. It was 20½ hands high, and, although only 5 years old, measured 45 inches round the stifle or knee joint, 93 inches girth, 34½ inches round the hip and 11 feet 4 inches in length. It was of perfect proportions, with a head 38 inches in length.

CANADIANS AT CAPE TOWN.

Receive a Grateful Welcome in South Africa's Metropolis.

The Cape Times of October 1st is to hand giving an account of the arrival in Cape Town on Sunday, Sept. 30th, of the Canadians who returned home by the Idaho. The citizens of Cape Town gave the Canadians a very warm welcome on their return from the front, which would have been better had not their train arrived two hours late. The Canadians, though they had endured many hardships, looked well and were much bronzed. Their torn and tattered clothing bore eloquent testimony of their deeds and perils and hardships. The Times says that "they were considerably moved—some almost to the point of tears—by the enthusiastic and generous attitude of the multitude, who showed considerable liberality in the dispensation of many little comforts and luxuries." The mayor of Cape Town, Mr. T. J. O'Reilly, made an excellent speech of welcome and appreciation to the Canadians. After the proceedings at the station the men went to the docks and embarked on the Idaho. On Monday morning, Oct. 1st, they bade adieu to South Africa.

She Was Pale and Languid

Too Nervous to Sleep, and Daily Grew Weaker and Weaker—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Restored Health and Vigour.

Mrs. E. McLaughlin, 95 Parliament street, Toronto, states:—"My daughter was pale, weak, languid, and very nervous. Her appetite was poor and changeable. She could scarcely drag herself about the house, and her nerves were completely unstrung. She could not sleep for more than half an hour at a time without starting up and crying out in excitement."

"As she was growing weaker and weaker I became alarmed, and obtained a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. She used this treatment for several weeks, and from the first we noticed a decided improvement. Her appetite became better, she gained in weight, the colour returned to her face, and she gradually became strong and well. I cannot say too much in favour of this wonderful treatment, since it has proven such a blessing to my daughter."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a blood-builder and nerve vitalizer of most unusual merit. In pill form, 50c. a box, at all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

A Sample

The following is a fair sample of letters being received by that most progressive Canadian Life Assurance Company.

Geo. Gooderham,
 49 Wellington Street, East.

TORONTO, Dec. 28th, 1899.

To the North American Life Assurance Company, Toronto.

Gentlemen,—I am in receipt of your cheque for $27,381.40, in settlement of my 15 year Endowment Policy, No. 2651, issued by you on Dec. 20th, 1884, for $20,000.

The result is highly satisfactory to me, and furnishes the strongest proof of the careful and excellent management of the North American Life.

Personally, I have been a strong advocate of Endowment Insurance, having carried over $500,000 on my life.

Yours truly,
 GEO. GOODERHAM.

Mr. Geo. Gooderham is one of Toronto's oldest and wealthiest citizens. He is President of the Bank of Toronto, Western Canada Loan Co., and connected with many other leading financial institutions.
