Darker Clouds Gathering over Ireland.

(From the New York Herald, Nov. 9th.)

The news from Ireland is gloomier and gloomier. There seems to be no point of compromise or sympathy between the government and the agitation. Mr. Parnell, who only the other day was the isolated leader of a faction which was the mockery of Parliament and the derision of the people, now advances to the position held by O'Connell as the leader, the tribune of the Irish people. Conservative men like the distinguished Justin McCarthy rally to his banner. The Church swings to his side. The radical movement in England considers the wisdom of making common cause with him. The Liberal Government with whom Irishmen have sympathized is the theme of Mr. Parnell's invective. No statesman has done so much for Ireland as Mr. Gladstone. No statesman is willing to do more. The Cabinet contains Mr. Bright, who went into office to do what he could for Ireland. Mr. Forster is Irish Secretary. He resigned his claims to high office in the Liberal Government, hoping that in a small place he might solve this penetrating, enervating problem. The agitators have turned against the Cabinet, and especially against Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Forster, as the enemies of Ireland. The alliance which Liberals in England and Ireland hoped would be a new bond of union between Ireland and England has been broken. When Mr. Gladstone meets Parliament he will find the Irish members among his most untiring opponents.

In the meantime Mr. Gladstone is asserting the authority of England. Pressed by the ruling classes—by all who own property, by people who feel that if an agitation can flourish in one part of the Empire it must flourish in another; that the right to sequester the lands of the Duke of Devonshire in Ireland means ultimately the exercise of the same right in England—the Premier is dealing with Mr. Parnell as with an avowed enemy of the crown. Mr. Gladstone holds that Mr. Parnell's position is inconsistent with the allegiance due by a subject to the Queen. Mr. Bradlaugh may organize land leagues. Mr. Labouchere may propose to abolish the Lords. Mr. O'Connor may wish to control the prerogatives of the crown. All this means nothing. It is a part of English freedom. There is no response from Englishmen. A radical club has about as much influence in vast, teeming London as a woman's rights convention in New York. It does not disturb the peace. No one cares about it. Crowds come to the gatherings as they came to hear the Tichborne trial or brood over the Balham mystery. If there is one thing about which London cares less than another it is Ireland. Public opinion has not advanced beyond Shakespeare's time, when an Irishman was not worthy of the importance given to Fusellen or Jack Cade. If Irishmen condemned themselves to sentimental grievances—even to questions of faith like Catholic emancipation—there would be the same indifference. But when the essence, the life, the soul of an agitation mean that there are no rights of property in land except to till it, the blow is aimed at the tenure of all land in England. If Cromwell's grants are to be attacked and destroyed by Mr. Parnell when may not the grants of Henry VIII be attacked by Mr. Labouchere and Mr. Bradlaugh? The power which drives Mr. Gladstone to make war upon Mr. Parnell is a power which sees that if Mr. Parnell can drive Mr. Herbert out of the ruins of Muckross Abbey a successor of Mr. Parnell may dispute the right of the Duke of Bedford to Woburn and of the Duke of Westminster to the better part of London.

The best that can be hoped for from the present gloomy condition of affairs is that the British government will take up the Irish question. The effort to imprison Mr. Parnell and his followers commits Mr. Gladstone to a large measure of reform. He is too wise to see that the prison never solves political problems. It is admitted that Ireland is suffering and that Parliament alone can give relief. If Mr. Gladstone fails Lord Beaconsfield stands waiting ready to deal with Ireland, as he dealt with reform. Lord Beaconsfield educated his party up to the acceptance of a measure from which even liberals shrunk. It would not surprise us if the end of the Parnell agitation was to make the Tory party the champions of the best interests of Ireland.

ARRESTED FOR FORGERY.—A man named George Murchie has been arrested on a charge of forgery and fraud. It is alleged that he was in Tangier, and from there telegraphed to Mr. J. K. Munnis an order to give him (Murchie) a quantity of clothing, forging the name of his brother-in-law, Capt. John Hawes, to the despatch. He then came to town, got the clothing from Mr. Munnis on the order, and drew $25 from Messrs. Pickford & Black on another order bearing Capt. Hawes' signature. He next chartered three schooners to go to P. E. Island and load produce for Boston. One vessel is now on the voyage to the Island. Capt. Hawes was communicated with in regard to the orders, and pronounced the signatures forgeries. Yesterday afternoon Detective Hunt and Sergeant Adams arrested Murchie.—H. Chronicle.

Washington Letter.

GOSSIP AT THE CAPITOL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 8, 1880.

The proceedings of the two Houses will be exactly the same as if Garfield had received all the votes in all the States. He will be declared elected and will be inaugurated without a murmur of dissent. It is not unlikely that resolutions of inquiry, as to events connected with the votes of several States, will be submitted in the House or Senate, but not with any idea that the regular proceedings incident to Garfield's assumption of the Presidential office shall be affected.

Of suggesting Cabinet officers for President Garfield, there is no end; but I find no one who says he has talked with that gentleman on the subject, and very few who believe any pledges have been made. As to the "policy" of the administration, there is equal fluency of suggestion, and equal absence of alleged declarations of the future President. It is generally believed that the inaugural will be written with a view of attracting men's minds to other subjects than the "Southern question," and that General Garfield will endeavor to impress upon us all the fact that that particular subject is not a desirable one for parties to divide upon.

Of the four Supreme Court Judges who, it is thought, will soon retire, one is from New England, Judge Clifford. If Judge Clifford should quit the Bench before March 4th next, there is no doubt the President would appoint Attorney General Devans to the position, but if Judge Hunt, of New York, or either of the other two firm Judges should create a vacancy, it is thought the influence brought to bear on the President would be sufficient to secure a successor from the same State as the retiring official. The Attorney General is known to desire the appointment.

There will be the usual batch of contested seats before the new House.

A P. E. I. PROSPECTOR.—A correspondent writes from Gaysboro, Oct. 26th, to the Halifax Herald:—Mr. H. McVarish, of Souris, P. E. I., an old practical and experienced Australian gold miner, has been off and on here prospecting through the Eastern Townships the last twelve months. Mr. McVarish's opinion exactly coincides with that of geologists, who have been also prospecting through the Eastern Townships—as to the vast richness of alluvial deposits, particularly in the County of Gaysborough. Mr. McVarish, with his brother, and son, returned here a few months ago, and are vigorously prosecuting their claims at the head of Gaysborough flat, where they have three shafts sinking simultaneously. As rain and surface water prevents further operations for this season, they are prepared to bring hand or steam pumps to their assistance next summer, when they can be used permanently on the bed rock. The Messrs. McVarish sunk several shafts in shallow sinkings, and the knowing ones here believe they were amply repaid, as the precious metal was seen in their possession in Halifax. However, the Messrs. McVarish while here were very reticent as to their success. We all admit they are plucky, and deserve encouragement and success, and it is a pity that more of our able, energetic and industrious Nova Scotians would not turn their attention in developing the hidden treasures beneath their feet, rather than risking their lives amidst the wild regions of the far west, where they encounter daily contests with the scalping knife and tomahawk of the red man.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total $1,200—all which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since, without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it for their benefit."
