CHAPTER XXI.

'Nonsense! It's the silliest lie a sensible man like you ever believed, to say a woman makes a house comfortable. It's a story got up, because the women are there, and something must be found for 'em to do. I tell you there isn't a thing under the sun that needs to be done at all but what a man can do better than a woman, unless it's bearing children, and they do that in a poor make-shift way; it ha' better ha' been left to the men. I tell you a woman 'll bake you a pie every week of her life, and never come to see that the hotter th' oven the shorter the time. I tell you a woman 'll make your porridge every day for twenty years, and never think of measuring the proportion between the meal and the milk —a little more or less, she'll think doesn't signify; the porridge will be aw'k'ard now and then; if it's wrong, it's gummat in the milk, or it's sommat in the water. Look at me! I make my own bread, and there's no difference between one batch and another from year's end to year's end; but if I'd got any other woman besides Vixen in the house, I must pray to the Lord every baking to give me patience if the bread turned out heavy. And as for cleanliness, my house is cleaner than any other house on the Common, though the half of them swarm with women. Will Baker's lad comes to help me in a morning, and we get as much cleaning done in one hour without any fuss as a woman 'ud get done in three, and all the while be sending buckets o' water after your ankles, and let the fender and the fire irons stand in the middle o' the floor half the day for you to break your shins against 'em. Don't tell me about God having made such creature to be companions for us! I don't say but he might make Eve to be a companion to Adam in Paradise; there was no cooking to be spoiled there, and no other woman to cackle with and make mischief, though you see what wischief, she did as soon as she'd an opportunity. But it's an impious unscriptural opinion to say a woman's a blessing to a man now; you might as well say adders, and wasps, and dogs, and wild beasts are a blessing, when they're only the evils that belong to this state o' probation, which it's lawful for a man to keep as clear of as he can in this life, hoping to get quit of 'em forever in another.'

Bartle had become so excited and angry in the course of his invective that he had forgotten his supper, and only used the knife for the purpose of rapping the table with the haft. But toward the close the raps became so sharp and frequent, and his voice so quarrelsome, that Vixen felt it incumbent on her to jump out of the hamper and bark vaguely.
'Quiet, Vixen,' snarled Bartle, turning round upon her. 'You're like the rest o' the women—always putting in your word before you know why.' Vixen returned to her hamper again in humiliation, and her master continued his supper in a silence which Adam did not choose to interrupt; he knew the old man would be in a better humor when he had had his supper and lighted his pipe. Adam was used to hear him talk in this way, but had never learned so much of Bartle's past life as to know whether his view of married comfort was founded on experience. On that point Bartle was mute; and it was even a secret where he had lived previous to the twenty years in which, happily for the peasants and artizans of this neighborhood, he had been settled among them as their only schoolmaster.
If anything like a question was ventured on this subject, Bartle always replied, 'Oh, I have seen many places—I've been a deal in the south,' and the Loamshire men would as soon have thought of asking for a particular town or village in Africa as in the south.'

'Now then, my boy,' said Bartle, at last, when he had poured out his second mug of ale and lighted his pipe—'now, then, we'll have a little talk. But tell me first, have you heard any particular news to-day?'
'No,' said Adam, 'not as I remember.'
'Ah! they'll keep it close, they'll keep it close, I dare say. But I found it out by chance; and it's news that may concern you, Adam, else I'm a man that don't know a superficial square foot from a solid.' Here Bartle gave a series of fierce and rapid puffs, looking earnestly the while at Adam. Your impatient loquacious man has never any notion of keeping his pipe alight by gentle measured puffs; he is always letting it go nearly out, and then punishing it for that negligence. At last he said—'Satchell's got a paralytic stroke. I found it out the lad they sent to Treddleston for the doctor, before seven o'clock this morning. He's a good way beyond sixty, you know; it's much if he ever gets over it.'
'Well,' said Adam, 'I dare say there'd be more rejoicing than sorrow in the parish at his being laid up. He's been a selfish, tale-bearing, mischievous fellow; but, after all, there's nobody he's done so much harm to as to th' old Squire.
Though it's the Squire himself as is to blame—making a stupid fellow like that a sort o' man-of-all-work, just to save th' expense of having a proper man to look after th' estate. And he's lost more by ill-management of the woods, I'll be bound, than 'ud pay for two stewards. If he's laid on the shelf it's to be hoped he'll make way for a better man; but I don't see how it's to make any difference to me.'
'But I see it, but I see it,' said Bartle, 'and others besides me. The Captain's coming of age now—you know that as well as I do—and it's to be expected he'll have a little more voice in things. And I know, and you know too, what 'ud be the Captain's wish about the woods, if there was a fair opportunity for making a change. He's said in plenty of people's hearing that he'd make you manager of the woods to-morrow if he'd the power. Why, Carrol, Mr.

The Locomotion of Shells.
The great oouch or strombus, has a veritable sword that it thrusts out, sticks into the ground, and by a muscular effort jerks itself along, making a decided leap. The squids, that are the brightest forms of mollusks, leap entirely clear of the water, often several feet. They are the ink-bearers, and from their ink-bags comes the sepia used by artists, while their bone is the cuttle-fish bone of commerce. Many of the have a method of flying through the water that is quite novel. They are generally beautifully colored, and have long, streaming tentacles, and suddenly without warning, they dart up from the bottom, and by a violent opening and shutting of their valves rush away with their long, reddish hair streaming after them, presenting a very curious appearance. The shell known as the Lima Nians is particularly remarkable for these flights, and all the scallops are jumpers and leapers. When placed in a boat they have been known to leap out, and the ordinary scallop has been known to jump out of a pot when placed upon a stove. A description of the different methods by which shells move would fill a volume.

The Old Time Before Us.
Another fine specimen of a Roman pavement has been unearthed at Brideswell Lane, Bath, England, in the course of some excavating work. The pattern is composed of octagons two feet seven inches each way, the intermediate being filled in with squares. It is the centre of each octagon is a double quarterfoil with a circle in the centre, and at each end are pointed leaves. The tesserae are small, from half to three-quarters of an inch square, and the colors used are red, white, blue and black. On one side of the pavement is a broad margin made of Roman tiles, about six inches by one and a half inches each, laid herringbone fashion. So much of the original work as can be recovered is to be carefully removed and kept in a safe place for future examination and inspection.
