British Labor Leader Calls For Talks To End Suez Crisis

BLACKPOOL, England (Reuters)—Labor party leader Hugh Gaitskell Monday called for fresh negotiations to end the Suez Canal crisis as party members overwhelmingly condemned the Conservative government's handling of the dispute.

Gaitskell's plea for a "halfway house settlement" of the crisis brought on by Egypt's nationalization of the canal made at the opening of the party's 55th annual delegate conference. Gaitskell told the 1,300 delegates representing 6,300,000 party members there is not much doubt Egyptian President Nasser would agree to a negotiated settlement if the temperature of the crisis is allowed to drop.

COMPROMISE

Under the suggested compromise settlement, Egypt would maintain the Suez Canal with her own management board and the canal users would have a supervisory board to regulate charges and negotiate development plans. Gaitskell, who was given a big ovation on his first appearance at the conference as party leader, complained that even now the government has given no pledge that force will be used only in accordance with the United Nations charter.

Of Prime Minister Eden's government, Gaitskell said: "They really did intend to use force. They cannot deny it. They can wriggle and evade as much as they like. The conference's Suez resolution was a rebuke to the government. It is in the government's interest to refer the dispute to the Security Council."

Truck Drivers Protest Fines; Ask For Higher Hauling Rates

Work on the Trans-Canada Highway in the Province yesterday came to a standstill when truck operators staged a walkout in protest to fines which the Government imposed upon them for hauling loads in excess of the amount for which their vehicles were registered.

The truckers appointed four spokesmen who interviewed Premier Matheson, Hon. J. George MacKay, Minister of Highways and Hon. B. Earle Macdonald, Provincial Treasurer.

Following the interview Premier Matheson said that when the truckers agreed to pay the required registration for the loads they were hauling, the Government would not interfere with them in any way. He said it was nothing but "dishonest" for a trucker to register his truck for 14,000 lbs and then haul loads up to 30,000 lbs.

NO INJUSTICE Hon. Mr. Macdonald felt that no injustice was being worked upon the truck owners. He pointed out that heavily loaded trucks cause most of the damage to the roads and bridges and if the income does not come from registration fees it will have to come in increased gasoline tax.

Hon. Mr. MacKay, Minister of Highways could not be contacted for comment.

A spokesman for the truckers explained that a check on the loads being carried on the Trans-Canada Highway was being kept by a Government inspector on the job and when the weight slips were turned in, it was revealed that the majority of the trucks were carrying loads considerably greater than that called for by their registration.

BIG 3 DIVIDED ON APPROACH TO EGYPT

15 Powers Have Set Up Suez Canal Users Ass'n

LONDON (AP) — Suez Canal Users Association was set up Monday amid reports of Western Big Three disagreement on whether Egypt be persuaded or forced to accept international control of the waterway.

Fifteen of the 18 countries invited to London joined the association at once. Japan, Pakistan and Ethiopia remained on the fence. Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd of Britain once more refused to rule out force as a final solution. Lloyd told reporters just before leaving by plane for New York and the UN Security Council debate on Suez.

Lloyd and Foreign Minister Christian Pineau of France will meet with U.S. State Secretary Dulles ahead of the UN debate in an effort to present a united front before the Security Council.

The United States, Britain and France sponsored the formation of SCUA as a stopgap group to press Egypt peacefully to give up sole control of the waterway. The UN Security Council is due to debate the crisis Friday. Informed diplomats here say the United States favors a softer approach to Egypt than Britain and France.

The Americans would like to get Egypt into talks. The Britons and French, whose interests are more directly at stake in the outcome, would like to chart courses that would compel President Nasser to come to acceptable terms.

The first organizational meeting of SCUA was attended by the envoys of 18 powers, representing 90 per cent of the shipping that passed through Suez. All have supported the idea of an international regime to control the canal. Japan, Pakistan and Ethiopia were represented by observers. They have not yet decided whether to join SCUA.

The findings of the experts be set before a second session of the conference of ambassadors probably Wednesday. These include the appointment of an administrator.

While SCUA's exact role not entirely clear, reports from Port Said at the northern end of the canal said the Egyptians, managing the job of hand ships smoothly. The Egyptian administrator of Suez claimed 1,592 ships passed through the waterway, including September — only five less than in September, 1955 when canal was under management of the old company.

Two Toronto Men Feared Lost At Sea

TORONTO (CP)—Two Toronto sailing enthusiasts are believed lost on the North Atlantic. It was learned here Monday.

Al Batterby, 29, and Bert Smith, 32, left Montreal June 14 in their 26-foot sailboat, Orenda, to sail to Britain. A leak developed and they returned to Halifax for repairs but set out again Sept. 1.

The Orenda now has been found drifting empty in mid-Atlantic. News of the missing men broke today when the United States liner America, bound from Europe to New York, reported sighting the Orenda. The America's captain said he inspected the craft—found it was manned and found the water and tiller lashed—and found no sign of life. He left the sailboat drifting.

Smith and Batterby hoped to be the first to sail a boat of less than 30 feet across the Atlantic.

Eisenhower And Stevenson Trade Election Punches

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—President Eisenhower told Americans Monday night they can look forward to 70,000,000 jobs "at good wages" if they re-elect him and reject what he said is the Democratic "zigzag, directionless road of trial and error."

Eisenhower unleashed a slashing attack on the Democratic controlled Congress and his opponent, Adlai E. Stevenson.

Without mentioning Stevenson's name, Eisenhower accused his rival of engaging "in the wild extremes of charging this administration with such fabulous failing as not guarding the peace and not caring for the welfare of any humble citizen or any needy family in our land."

It would be "foolish," the president said in a speech prepared for a political rally in the University of Kentucky coliseum here to "revert now to the unsound, inflationary, anti-business, heavy-tax, heavy-spending, government-interference, centralized-control policies" which he said the Democrats had followed.

VIGOROUS ATTACK

In bringing his campaign to this political border state—which he lost by only 700 votes in 1952—Eisenhower launched his most vigorous attack thus far on the Democrats.

Before takeoff for Lexington, Eisenhower told a crowd of 50,000 that filled most of Cleveland's public square that the Democrats had been talking "wicked nonsense" about his administration.

Eisenhower said that the Democrats had claimed "they alone truly care for the working men and women of America, and that the Republican party is really a vague kind of political conspiracy by big business to destroy organized labor and to bring hunger and torment to every worker in America."

"This is more than political bunk," Eisenhower said. "It is willful nonsense. It is wicked nonsense. And they know it."

WASHINGTON (AP)—Adlai E. Stevenson called Monday night for a federal aid-to-education program to help provide 50,000 teachers and 100,000 classrooms each year, plus a college education for all "able students."

The Democratic presidential nominee accused the Eisenhower administration of having "utterly failed to develop a comprehensive policy for education."

He said the administration demonstrated a lack of "leadership in the cause of most valuable resource—our brain."

Stevenson outlined his goals in a statement which described as "the passport to a better society" through "education—for one and all."

PROGRAM OUTLINED

It was an elaboration of program Stevenson sketched in a speech at Milwaukee Friday.

The statement was issued Wednesday. Stevenson conferred with legislators on the eve of his departure for two weeks of campaigning in the northeast and far west.

Four Seen Contenders For George Drew's Former Job

OTTAWA (CP)—Fast footwork Monday among supporters of four possible candidates for the Progressive Conservative leadership marked the first of two days of party meetings to plan a convention which will name a new leader.

Officially, the field was bare of declared candidates following a closed meeting of 47 of the party's 63 Commons members. None was expected to announce his intentions before tonight at the earliest after the executive of the Conservative national association meets.

But four men, all Commons members, still held the centre of speculation as likely contestants. They are John Diefenbaker, 61, of Prince Albert, Sask.; George Hees, 46, of Toronto; Donald Fleming, 51, of Toronto; and Davie Fulton, 40, of Kamloops, B.C.

NO DECISION

All state that they have not yet decided whether to seek the post vacated by Hon. George Drew 11 days ago because of ill health. Consensus of party members, who declined to be quoted, was that Mr. Diefenbaker, a prominent western lawyer who twice has tried for the party leadership, has majority support among Commons members. He is Conservative foreign affairs spokesman in the Commons.

The party's Commons membership will have few actual votes—although certainly some influence—among the 1,300-odd delegates expected to attend the leadership convention.

Monday's caucus meeting took only two formal steps in four hours. One was to unanimously reaffirm Hon. Earl Rowe, 62-year-old member for Dufferin-Simcoe, as acting party leader. The second was to send a telegram to Mr. Drew expressing "deep regret" at his decision to resign.

Those moves were completed within the first hour. What was discussed in the next three hours was not made public. But it was believed to deal with the decisions to be made at today's national executive meeting—including the place and date of the convention.
