Why you take Cold and Cough.

Generally caused by exposure to cold, wet feet, sitting in a draught, coming from hot and crowded places, in thin dress, or wearing damp clothes, stockings, or any other cause tending to check suddenly the perspiration. The result produces inflammation of the lining membrane of the lungs or throat, and this causes phlegm or matter, which nature tries to throw off by expectoration. In many cases she is unable to do so without assistance, and this is

HOLLAND'S GIRL QUEEN.

Pretty Little Wilhelmina in the National Costume.

The accompanying portrait of the young Queen of the Netherlands is one of the last taken of her majesty and represents her in the national dress of a young Hollanderess. She wears the gold head-dress, covered with lace, worn by ladies of noble birth. The beautiful ornaments across the forehead and the diamonds in gold, as are also the silk ornaments.

Queen Wilhelmina is a very pretty girl, with bright blue eyes and a particularly sweet expression of countenance. She is fond of all out-door pleasures, and rides and drives every day. Her pets are numerous dogs, and she has a number of all kinds; and she has the facility of attracting all animals to her. Queen Wilhelmina celebrated her thirteenth birthday on the 31st of August, an anniversary that was kept with great rejoicings all over the kingdom of Holland. Her majesty looks much older than she really is, and more like a girl of sixteen than only thirteen.

The people of Holland are already anxious to know what young Prince will be chosen for the future consort of their Queen, and it is well known that the German Emperor is in hopes that one of his sons, Prince Alfred of Prussia, will be chosen; but this choice would be unpopular with a great number of the Queen's subjects. Other Princes who have been mentioned are, one of the sons

HER DIVIDED HABIT.

California Women Follow a Sensible Sister's Example.

California women are adopting the bifurcated skirt for riding, and a woman mounted man-fashion is no longer an uncommon sight out there. The initiative was taken by a lady who was in the habit of accompanying her husband on long rides and found herself uncomfortably hampered by the long heavy costume in vogue. So she contrived a divided skirt to suit her own convenience, and one day, mounted on a superb black horse, she appeared in her new dress on the streets of Alameda. Society soon took notice of her "stunning," and no longer does she attract attention on her daily rides. Her next experiment was to show herself in the divided skirt in San Francisco, and there again her appearance disarmed criticism. She has this to say about the innovation: "When I first commenced to ride across my right foot was useless to me. I had ridden so long the other way that the right foot was weak and I could not raise myself in the stirrups. But now I am as comfortable and well as ever, and I am, equally developed, and not one-sided, as all women who ride much in the side-saddle are. As for the new skirt, it is showing the figure, that is all nonsense. It is not more immodest than bicycle riding, which has become so common, and it does not begin to reveal the lines of the figure as the side-saddle and the riding skirt drawn tight across the hips do."

This lady now has a large following in San Francisco, and Oakland and Alameda equestriennes have followed her example. In detail the costume is described by one of its wearers as follows: "The cross-saddle rider wears tight, any sort of hose and cloth garters to the knees. Over the tight hose a divided skirt, full enough to hang gracefully, and of the same cloth and material as the outside garment. This skirt is walking length. With this skirt is worn a blouse shirt-waist—fitted silk in summer and cloth in winter. Then comes the outside garment. This is simply an ulster of conventional cut and appearance. In material it varies from cheviot or serge to the finest broadcloth. It may make close-fitting, or half-fitting, according to taste and figure, although the close-fitting ulster gives the trimmest appearance. The ulsters are all double breasted to a point about six inches below the waist. Here the button-holes are concealed by a flap. In the back the ulster is cut with a little fulness and is open all the way up the back. Here, also, are buttons and button-holes. When walking, the ulster is closed by means of these two rows of hidden buttons, and as it is precisely of walking length, the rider can walk any distance and be in correct street dress. Indeed, the ulsters are very pretty. Some of them have a single cape, others have triple military capes lined with silk. When on the horse the ulster is unbuttoned."—New York Evening Post.

An Esteemed Methodist Clergyman is Enabled to Resume His Work!

Crateful and Honest Words!

Clergymen, like other mortals, have their days of sickness and suffering—their times of mental and physical depression. The great Healer and wise Dispenser of mercies has so ordained matters that even His ministers and servants must look to the same means for physical rebuilding as are put within the reach of men and women of all callings.

Within the last two years many well-known and eminent clergymen who have labored constantly and assiduously in the Master's vineyard, have been forced to give up active work owing to bodily infirmities and diseases. Though incapacitated physically, their souls yearned for longer service and work. Happy for such, Providence has made a wise provision: His given them a renewing agent from nature's lap known as Faine's Celery Compound, an ideal food for recuperating the body and strengthening the nerve and brain power.

The Rev. Dr. Wilson, of St. John, N.B., is one of the ablest of our able men in the Methodist Church; he is one of Canada's most gifted lecturers, and is possessed of high literary talents. Thousands in Canada have listened with rapt attention to his discourse on "The Typical Irishman," "Trails of Scottish Character," "The Model Young Man," "A Tramp Abroad" and "Imperial Federation."

Unfortunately for the church and country, Dr. Wilson was laid aside some time ago owing to severe sickness—a complication of troubles. After repeated but vain efforts to secure health through physicians and their remedies, the Doctor tells us of his marvellous success with Faine's Celery Compound, a medicine that is now doing such noble work in our midst. He says:—

"For many years I have been a sufferer from asthma, but was able to continue in active ministerial work until the winter of 1891, when a gripe laid me aside and compelled me to be a supernumerary. Since then, I had recourse to various means in order to bring about a restoration of health, but without any real benefit. I was induced to try Faine's Celery Compound, and it afforded me very great pleasure to be able to say that I have been greatly helped thereby, and regard it as the best medicine I know anything of. My general health has so greatly improved that I now do a great deal of work, and in the improvement continues I will be inclined to re-enter upon active service at the next conference. I wish you every success in your good work of saving the souls of your fellowmen."

Drop a postal card to Mr. George Rose, of Peterborough, and ask him what Menzies's Kidney and Liver Pills did for him in relieving him of the intense pain caused by the passage of stone or calculi from the bladder. Hypodermic injections had to be resorted to in order to relieve the agonizing pains at times, but the use of Menzies's Kidney and Liver Pills enabled the kidneys to wash out the sand and debris from the system, and neutralized the acid formations.

The Doctor Passed Him.

GRAVEBURY, Sept. 18.—About a year the newspapers contained of the curious case of Sam Murray, a railroad fireman of this place. He was paralyzed, as a consequence of an injury received while on duty, and for two years was unable to work. Several doctors, among them some Toronto specialists, pronounced him incurable and his case hopeless. The Grand Trunk Railway Company paid him his full disability claim, and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen was about to pay a similar claim, when Murray astonished everybody by a return to health. It was proven at the time, beyond the possibility of a doubt, that Murray's recovery was due to Dodd's kidney pills. A few days ago Murray applied to a life insurance company to take out a policy on his life. Two physicians have just examined him, pronounced him a desirable risk, and recommended the company to issue a policy. That's the kind of work Dodd's kidney pills do.
