UNUSED TO THE CLIMATE

A Frenchman Finds Canadian Weather Had a Bad Effect on His Health.

St. EUSTACHE, Que., Aug. 20 —August DuBois landed here from France a perfect stranger to the weather conditions prevailing in this country. The food also differed to that from which he had been accustomed, and his heart being weak, the change had a serious effect upon it. He went to a medical man who did him no good. He went to others with a similar result in each case.

"I had to go to Montreal," he says, "to work for the Grand Trunk, and in that city met a man who was suffering from the same thing as myself, but had started to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. He told me they were doing him good. He was kind enough to give me a few of them. I took them. I felt myself much better. I procured a box and in fifteen days felt like a different man."

The men who are always boasting of their ability to take care of themselves have a chance to try when their wives go away for a vacation and leave them to keep house.

PRINTING FOR PROFESSIONAL MEN.

Lawyers and Doctors are, as a rule, very particular about their stationery and all their printing. They want good paper used in their letterheads, noteheads and envelopes and they want the printed matter done tastefully and carefully.

Perhaps you are a professional man. You've been having your printing done to suit you, and you've been paying great big prices. That's not right. You should get good printing and not have to pay big prices.

Try us next time you want something done. The work will be good. The price will be low.

A MOTHER DOE AND HER FAWNS FROM FOREST AND STREAM.

Hark! What's that? Looking intently towards the point. I see two tiny spotted toddlers wading out from the bushes. Not more than four or five feet, but there they are as plain as life can make them. They are certainly not over two or three weeks old, spotted like two leopards, ears so large and awkward looking, their knees hardly seem able to support their ungainly little bodies, but happy as the children of the forest only know how to be when no danger is nigh and big mama is present to warn and watch over them.

But where is mama? Ah! here comes the stately old dame. First she puts only her nose out of the bushes, looks up and down the stream, sniffs the air and seemingly satisfied that all is well, she slowly and majestically walks out in midstream and takes a drink. The little ones by this time are cavoring like two kittens, splashing the water and making a great of noise. Mama is afraid evidently, there is too much noise for she backs out of the water, and the little ones obey her instructions and reluctantly follow.

Fortunately there is quite a clearing along the left bank, and slowly and stealthily backing about 10 feet up the hill. I again a position where I can plainly see mama and the babies with out being seen or heard.

The old lady is quietly feeding nipping the tender branches with much relish. The little ones think it is time for their breakfast, and to watch them as they pull at their sources of nourishment reminds me of a fullblooded Jersey cow with a calf. I wonder if long years ago there was any relationship existing between the two?

The doe is a big female. She weighs 200 pounds. She wears her spring and summer garment—her red petticoat. The duties of maternity evidently agree with her, for she is sleek and fat. Now mama compels the toddlers to stop eating, and even gives the largest of the fawns a slight tap on the head to prevent his rushes for more sustenance.

This furry thing promises to be a buck, for he is determined to get what he wants, but his mother is too quick or him. She leaps from one side to the other with the agility that only a deer possesses, and now both little ones, entering into the spirit of play, run and jump in imitation of their mother. Now the dame runs twenty rods up the hill and the little ones follow. Now they all come back pell mell. No sooner have the little ones reached the water's edge than they repeat the performance again and again.

How proud mama looks! Were there ever two such lovely fawns? Not to her way of thinking. After having run about ten times, they evidently tire and come up to partake of the maternal font. But instinct teaches that it is not good to eat when so heated from violent exercise, so the mother leads them to water, lets them drink and then again tempts them to repeat their performance of running and romping. It strikes me the mother has an object in view. Can it be to teach her young to gain strength and surefootedness? I think so. Now the two urchins come tumbling down the hillside with an impetuosity that is undeniable. The smaller one of the two is enabled to stop just at the water's edge, but the baby buck is coming so quick and he has so little control of himself, he tumbles from the embankment and falls with a resounding splash into the water and then begins to bleat exactly like a calf as much as to say, "Mama, mama, sister pushed me in the water. Come help me, I am hurt." And now I make my mistake. The laugentire affair is so ludicrous, I laugh and that very loud, and then look should see the doe. One quick in my direction one quicker jump inot obscurity, a call for her offspring and that settles it.

BY THE BACK DOOR.

Mr. Rudyard Kipling in his recent evidence before the Hospital Commission stated some breezy facts to the chairman, Lord Justice Romer.

In relating his experience he said that the first request for hospital supplies came from the nurses. They wanted pyjamas. Not only did they want pyjamas, but they wanted them so badly that they asked him to smuggle them into the hospital by the back door.

From the "Absent-minded Beggar" stores Mr Kipling procured 98 pairs of pyjamas, loaded them into a Cape cart, and in due course delivered them to the nurses by the back door of the hospital. News of this easy method of dodging official red tape travelled quickly between hospitals.

More requests for pyjamas met him at the next hospital he visited, requests coupled with the injunction about delivering the much-needed clothing by the back door route. Then followed requisitions for drugs, pillow-slips, and sundry other articles. "These drugs were sent privately," added Mr. Kipling, "because the general impression was that that was the better and more expeditious way to get them in."

"If you had given these things openly, what then?" asked Prof. Cunningham.

"I imagine I should have got the people into trouble who complained that they wanted them," replied Mr. Kipling, dryly.

"But how could a medical man who wanted drugs object to that course?" persisted Dr. Church.

"As they say at the Cape," began Mr. Kipling, "you would never get them. It was all done to save time. When a man is ill you cannot wait for routine. He wants the drugs. I do not say there were not drugs there. They could not be got at. As a matter of fact, I was expressly told that they had drugs at the hospital."

Clear and incisive came the sentences, delivered in the tones of a man of few words, but every word to the point.

There was no doubt as to the minds of the commission as Mr. Kipling finished speaking. Almost unconsciously Lord Romer voiced the absolute concurrence of himself and his associates with Mr. Kipling's views by his next question, which was rather a suggestion to fill in an omission.

"You sent the pyjamas for the same reason?" his Lordship said.

"Absolutely. Simply that they should get them more quickly."

Having settled the efficiency of the back door or method of circumventing official red tape, the commission did not pursue the matter further.

Of his experience in Bloemfontein Mr. Kipling had little to say. He was there before the outbreak of an epidemic, but he saw enough to show how sick patients might expect to fare.

The hospitals preferred wounded to sick, he said. They did not want dysentery or enteric patients. They were long and troublesome cases, and not so interesting as wounded.

In reply to the president, Mr. Kipling candidly admitted that he found the hospitals at Bloemfontein perfectly clean. Everybody worked very hard, and the only complaint was the slowness in getting anything that was necessary.

The curious reference to Woodstock in the beginning of Mr. Kipling's evidence has not escaped Dr. Church. Seeing the possibility of eliciting something which might offset the damaging reply to his former question about drugs, Dr. Church asked:—

"You did not go to Woodstock."

"No," replied Mr. Kipling. "The hospital there was unspeakable. It stank. You could smell it from the train."

With this parting shot Mr. Kipling's evidence concluded.

Weak, Sickly Children

Are Restored to Health and Vigour by Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Many children are pale, weak, and bloodless from their birth. Many others have their blood and nerves exhausted, and their systems broken down by the ravages of disease, or as the result of over-study at school.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the ideal treatment for children. It supplies the very elements which are lacking in the pale, weak, and nervous. It restores the colour and richness to the blood, invigorates the nerves, and builds up the system. As a restorative after the exhausting and debilitating effects of measles, scarlet fever, and such ailments, it is of incalculable worth.

Mrs. Stephen Dempsey, Albury, P. E. county, Ont., writes:—"My little granddaughter, nine years old, was very pale and weak, and had no appetite. She had a tired, worn-out appearance, and was delicate and sickly. I got some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for her, and it has helped her very much. She is gaining considerably in weight and looks real healthy."
