

MAKING THE RICH PAY

fore be supported by the rich. When we speak of making the rich pay, we don't mean demanding that the government support the students, because where does the government money come from. It comes from the working people. We want the rich themselves to pay.

Q: What can be done about the problems of the foreign students in Canada?

Miss Schmidt: Now that foreign imperialists don't need so many trained workers, as the economic crisis deepens and as education cutbacks continue, the foreign students are being singled out for attack. This is for two reasons, one being in order to divide the students, to drive a wedge between foreign students and Canadian students so that we won't unite against these attacks. The other reason foreign students are singled out is that they are the least able to defend themselves. If they make too much of an outcry against differential fees, they can very easily be deported.

By saying this I don't want to give the impression that I don't think that foreign students should resist these attacks. They should. Foreign students cannot be cowed down by these threats. We have to stand up to this kind of intimidation wherever it occurs.

Q: How do you stand on the proposals for a veterinary college and a new athletic facility at UPEI? Are these the answers to declining enrollment?

Miss Schmidt: I think it would be great to have the veterinary college here and to have the athletic facilities built up, I think that we should have these things here at UPEI, but you can't look at them as a solution to declining enrollment. To build these things and at the same time not to decrease tuition fees will still leave you with declining enrollment. The main problem in declining enrollment is that the increased fees are forcing more and more students to give up their studies.

Q: Have you a stand on the legalization of marijuana?

Miss Schmidt: We've got no moral opposition or legal opposition to marijuana at all. What we oppose, and we oppose the same thing with alcohol, is people becoming so pre-occupied with marijuana or alcohol that their whole life centers around it.

You have to look at the history of marijuana. Marijuana was promoted in the 1960's by the rich in order to undermine the youth and student movement. People became so pre-occupied with the drugs that it undermined the political activity of the time. Now marijuana is a way to turn the youth into petty criminals. The real pushers are hardly ever touched by the state. In fact, in the larger cities, very often it is the police who are pushing. It is the small people who use it just for fun, who are arrested and put into jail. This, we oppose very much.

Q: Have you any views on the deservability of capital punishment?

Miss Schmidt: First of all you have to look at who are the criminals in this country. We feel the criminals are the leaders who are selling out Canada's land and labor to the highest bidder. We think that this is traitorous activity. The leaders are Trudeau and Clark, Broadbent, he hasn't quite made it yet, but he wants to be one too. Then there are the various provincial leaders. Selling out is criminal, traitorous activity, and traitorous activity should be punished by death.

Q: How would a socialist state in Canada operate?

Miss Schmidt: We believe in a strong centralized government. The government would be controlled by a people's assembly whereby people all over the country would elect their representatives. Unlike today, the people running for office would have to have as their first priority meeting the needs of the people and we would back this up with some guarantees. First of all, people elected into office would be paid only workman's wages. They would not be allowed to use their position to enrich themselves. They would also have to come back regularly to the people who elected them and give a report on their activities at a public meeting. Then if the people at that meeting decide the representative is not serving their interests, he can be replaced immediately.

In addition to the elected representatives, there would be several mass organizations that have direct input into the government, for example, the trade unions, the women's organization, the youth organization. All these would have a direct input into the government and at the same time the government would go through these to deal directly with the people.. We'll also have local governments, but the main thing is that the natural resources of the country will not belong to one little group here and one little group there. The natural resources will belong to the whole country and will be used to meet the needs of all the people.

Q: Let me end our interview by asking how you would cure economic ills. Ills like inflation and unemployment?

Miss Schmidt: All the problems of Canada, unemployment, inflation, the deficit, the oppression of women, regional disparity, all of them are a result of the rotten capitalist system and the constant drive for maximum profits. We will expropriate the wealth of the rich without compensation. We will throw the U.S. out of Canada, and we will use the expropriated wealth to develop the country, to meet the needs of Canada.
