Georgetown High In Festival

"It is gratifying to note that for the first time Georgetown High School sent three groups to the Music Festival this year. Mrs. Holden McLeure had a great deal of work with these pupils, and it is a step forward indeed that Georgetown School, through her collaboration, was able to be represented at the festival.

The Home and School Association sponsored the project, putting on an amateur concert in April in order to raise the necessary funds to charter a bus for transportation to Charlottetown.

On Tuesday, May 5th, approximately sixty-five children boarded the special bus and were conveyed safely to town. It was a new experience for them all, and long to be remembered. Mr. Lloyd Shaw gave them a special welcome, finding a great interest in their initial appearance, as he was principal of Georgetown School for some years.

The helpful remarks of the adjudicators will give the choruses valuable aid in their further efforts in this direction, and we hope will start them enthusiastically on the long, hard road to perfection. Special thanks are due to the teachers who accompanied the children to Charlottetown and saw that they were returned safe and sound to their homes at night. These were: Miss A. Keenan, Mrs. G. Solomon, and Mr. D. MacCormack. All those who helped to make this project possible, parents, teachers, and the children themselves, will be proud of this effort and ready to give their utmost support to similar undertakings in the future.

Athlone Fellowship Goes To Georgetown Engineer

Mr. Fred A. DeLory of Georgetown, who graduated in Engineering from McGill University in 1948 has been awarded an Athlone Fellowship.

Minister Queried

Minister because he has forgotten to put in a little extra here to complete the plans for the much talked of Post Office Department.

Mr. DeLory also asked the Minister of Public Works for the total cost of the new proposed federal building at O'Leary in Prince County. The Minister replied:

"This amount at O'Leary, ($25,000) is to provide toward the purchase of a site and erection of a public building to accommodate the Post Office and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at O'Leary. The proposed work is requested by the Post Office Department which states that they are at present provided with insufficient space. They require about four times as much as they have. This was strongly recommended to us by the Post Office Department."

Mr. DeLory remarked that he was glad to see another $100,000 for Prince Edward Island in the supplementary estimates, making a total, in addition to public works of $155,000.

"The Minister has forgotten," he said, "that there are three constituencies on the Island because this money is for King's and Prince. I am very glad to see them get the money but there is not a dollar for the constituency of Queen's. I am sure this is an oversight on the part of the Minister."

Building Lost In Fire At Murray Harbor North

"Fire destroyed a building containing a co-operatively owned grain crusher on the farm of James Henderson, Murray Harbor North, on Saturday about 5 p.m. The fire started when the engine operating the crusher backfired. Soon the building, crusher, and a large quantity of grain were consumed, together with a small adjacent building.

Only the work of the large crowd which gathered prevented the fire spreading to Mr. Henderson's barn and house. An adjacent workshop, where the fire was stopped, was also damaged. It is understood there was some insurance on the building and machinery.—A.O.

Rebuttal Today

Mr. Lapointe's rebuttal will come Monday when, the House was told the dinner hour will be cut in a new move to try to speed production.

The House swung over to veterans' problems after a free-ranging day in which these things happened:

1. Prime Minister St. Laurent returned from Washington and said he shares President Eisenhower's favorable decision in Washington on a seaway power application that would open the way for joint development of the power phase of the St. Lawrence Seaway. He also said the U. S. and Canada are considering a joint trouble-shooting body to nip trade problems in the bud and that he has high hopes that the U. S. isn't going to take more "retrograde" trade steps.

2. John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre) accused the works department of misleading Parliament and the government's housing agency of withholding information, charges denied by ministers responsible for those bodies.

3. Health Minister Martin said he is "not happy" with the state of civil defence in Canada but added that he knows of no country that is happy about that field. He told opposition critics that he would not want to say that if anything "were to happen this minute, our civil defence organization could take care of the kind of disaster that conceivably could happen." But Canadian civil defence was being built along solid lines.

pressure groups in the U. S. influencing congress to the extent that they affect our entry into their market.

"I quite agree that it is the committee's job to be a little gesture but I am afraid that it will not go very far."

The prime minister replied: "In the past we have taken steps to avoid things being done against us and something of that kind could eradicate many of these serious irritations."

Reports On Trip

The exchange developed as Mr. St. Laurent reported on the results of his two-day trip, in which he conferred for the first time with the new Republican administration.

He touched on the St. Lawrence Seaway and said he is hopeful that the U. S. federal power commission shortly will give a favorable decision on the New York State application to join with Ontario in developing the power phase of the multi-million-dollar project.

If those in the U. S. who oppose the seaway challenge any favor above U. S. federal power commission and try to obtain an injunction to delay digging, there would be a demand from pro-seaway authorities for a heavy bond to protect them against damages resulting from such action. The damages would be "impressive," Mr. St. Laurent said.

On the crucial issue of American trade policy, Mr. St. Laurent said he found President Eisenhower in favor of expanding world trade and against higher tariffs, but, of course, the president and his cabinet "are not in a position to forecast what Congress will do or may do."

was chairman of the all-Ukrainian executive committee, in effect, president of the Ukraine Republic.

In 1938, with the blood purge at its height, Pravda and Izvestia announced that Petrovsky had been fired from his Ukraine job. From that day until last Thursday, not a word was heard of him.

The Evidence

But this item alone is not the sole basis for the assumption of the revolt against Stalin. It fits in with other evidence.

1. The Soviet press has listed Plekhanov's works among the new required readings. Plekhanov, teacher of Lenin and Marxist philosopher, once was ridiculed by Stalin.

2. The Communist party bible, the magazine Kommunist, recently announced that the "restoration of the united world market" is desirable.

Division of the world so that half of its markets were cut off from the rest was a boast of Stalin, who insisted it was deepening a capitalist world crisis. The Communist item is an open admission that what Stalin accomplished in this respect was wrong.

3. The return to "democratic centralism" indicates a return to the principles of Lenin. Democratic centralism in effect means rule by a small elite which works out problems by discussion, makes decisions and then requires these decisions to be followed implicitly thereafter. Stalin became the symbol of one-man rule.

4. The new propaganda campaign on the world front smacks of Lenin. To him, the revolution was a world movement in which no permanent peace with capitalism was possible. There would be only strategic or tactical retreats.

Another Lenin Doctrine

Also from Lenin comes the doctrine that an eventual bloody clash between the worlds of capitalism and communism is inevitable. The overwhelming emphasis today on "production in effect means rule by a small elite which works out problems by discussion, makes decisions and then requires these decisions to be followed implicitly thereafter. Stalin became the symbol of one-man rule.

The tug-of-war apparently still goes on at the top between the Stalinists and those who would bury Stalin's memory gradually. Stalin still is mentioned respectfully, but with far less frequency and adulation than during his later years.
