For Tomorrow

SUNDAY'S horoscope indicates that you will benefit greatly by a period of seclusion and solitude so that you can make plans for the future. Do not worry about problems you expect to encounter, but turn your thoughts instead to a constructive analysis of your immediate situation and ways to improve it with a minimum of effort and expense.

In personal and domestic matters, keep the day free from distraction by avoiding controversial subjects and for the sake of peace, listen to suggestions, even though you may not intend to act on them. Let serenely be your byword now.

For the Birthday

If tomorrow is your birthday, you may look ahead to a year which brings satisfying recognition for past efforts. Do not let your outlook be dimmed by past disappointments. Keep your thoughts and actions keyed to the goals you've set. While slow and conservative action is best now, results of past endeavors should manifest themselves by mid-summer.

During November and December you should find that personal and romantic matters have turned out most satisfactorily, and you should begin to enjoy the good things of life. Be alert to new opportunities, especially during December.

The Day After Tomorrow

Cash in your benefits during the early hours! Things should have been working out to your advantage during the past few days and the time has come to consolidate your gains. How you handle your affairs this day can have an important bearing on your future — especially in business matters.

Where your personal affairs are concerned, this is an excellent period for handling belated correspondence or indulging in relaxing hobbies. Avoid controversial subjects, however, both in speech and in writings, since even small differences of opinion might lead to serious argument.

For the Birthday

If Monday is your birthday, you should find the year ahead one of steady progress. Your horoscope indicates the possibility of a promotion in the fall, with a corresponding momentary reward. Do not hesitate to put forth original ideas during this period since the cooperation and appreciation of superiors is assured.

Your personal relationships should be most stimulating during the next four months and, socially, you should find yourself in a whirlwind of activity during the same period. Domestic matters, courtship, romance and travel are favored for many months to come. All in all, a good year, even though not a spectacular one. A child born on this day will be intuitive, idealistic and extremely generous.

Contract Bridge

By Josephine Culbertson

A COSTLY LEAD

It is bad enough to lose one trick on the opening lead, but it is infinitely worse when that loss can be doubled by the declarer and result in the making of an otherwise doomed slam contract. South had the high-card values for his jump to three notrump, but he was on questionable ground in "suppressing" his five-card heart suit.

North dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

72	QJ9	65	K109	863
A K 8 3	K 7	K 9	Q 7 4 2	Q 5
W	N	E	S	3 2
4	10 8 5 3	A Q 10	A J	5

The bidding:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 3 NT Pass
4 NT Pass 6 NT Pass
Pass Pass

North's raise to four notrump was also open to debate. True, in the partnership's style of bidding, this was only a mild slam invitation — not a conventional Blackwood bid — but North's hand did not fully warrant slam aspirations.

West's highly amateurish opening lead, however, did much to compensate the enemy for the high cards they lacked — West naively opened his fourth-highest club! South won with the jack and took a spade finesse. East won the trick and returned a spade, not wanting to "break" his suit. Winning in his own hand, South carefully cashed his three diamond tricks, the ace of clubs and the king of hearts, then ran off the rest of the spades.

South had easy discards on the fourth and fifth spades but West was not so comfortable! Dummy was being reduced to only two cards — a heart and the club queen. Declarer still had the A-10 of hearts. West, who had to discard on the last spade, was forced to let go either the club king, promoting dummy's queen, or a heart. The first alternative was patently suicidal, so West gave up a heart, and declarer cashed both his cards in that suit.

Any opening lead other than a club would have meant automatic defeat of the contract.

Youths to Star as "Romeo And Juliet" at Stratford

LONDON—(AP) — Guardians of Shakespearean tradition announced Thursday that a 19-year-old actress who recently aspired to a walk-on part will play Juliet at Stratford-on-Avon this season. Her Romeo will be a 24-year-old actor who looks almost of high school age. Directors of Stratford's Shakespeare Memorial Theatre announced cast changes that place the accent on youth. They explained their break with the star system is temporary and is designed to give rising young actors and actresses chances to use their talents in big parts. The Memorial Theatre, they added, is one of the few in the world in a position to undertake such an experiment with an average age of 23, is the youngest ever to play a season at the Memorial Theatre. Although largely unknown to theatregoers, the youngsters have had a stern schooling in smaller parts at Stratford or as members of companies sent out from the Memorial Theatre. This year's season will open March 16 and continue eight months. Zena Walker, 19-year-old daughter of a Birmingham store manager, now is busy rehearsing as Juliet. She attended an audition at Stratford in 1952 hoping for a walk-on part. Instead she was given the role of Miranda in the tempest and the youngest member of the company to go to Australia. Laurence Harvey will be her Romeo, a part he has just been playing in the screen version made in Italy.

DOROTHY DIX'S COLUMN

Double Cheating

Wife Falls For Married Man While Mate Was In Korea

DEAR MISS DIX: Two years ago I married a boy I had known for three years. He was in service and I moved near his camp so we could be together. Even then, I wasn't sure whether I had married him for love or sympathy. Shortly after I became pregnant, he went to Korea, and I returned to my folks. While my husband was away, I fell in love with another man, also married and with one child. We can't stay away from each other, though we don't want to break up our homes. I know definitely that I don't love my husband, but is it a mistake for me to stay in our home for the sake of our baby? I know that in any circumstances I shall continue to see the man I love. Won't you please make a suggestion?

MRS. O. E.

ANSWER: Just what sort of suggestion do you want? You're now doing quite a job of double cheating. Of course, there's only one right thing for you to do; in fact, it's not only the right thing, but also that which is wise, sensible and expedient. Continuing on your present course will cause you heartbreak, disillusionment, the loss of your husband's love and of your own self-respect — and perhaps the loss of your child. What have you to balance these possibilities? A brief spell of stolen love, if it can be called love. As you see it in cold print, does it seem worthwhile?

TRY BEING A GOOD WIFE

You have, by your own admission, a good husband. Why not at least give him the break of trying to be a good wife? Give yourself, say,

That Body Of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

THE ILLNESS OF THE INDIVIDUAL MAY AFFECT THE WHOLE COMMUNITY

When an outstanding physician, after being professor of medicine at Harvard University for many years and for 27 years Chief of the Medical Service, Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, has something helpful to say to his fellow physicians and the public generally, we naturally listen to his words of experience given to us in his book, "Doctors, People, and Government," an Atlantic Press Book published by Little, Brown and Company, Boston. In the opening chapter, Dr. James Harvard Means, known to most physicians of America and Europe, speaks of the place of Medicine in the social order. "Medicine," broadly conceived, serves the imperative function of promoting, preserving, and restoring the health, both of the individual and the community. All its personnel, facilities, and organizations are but means to these ultimate or final objectives. It is one of the great systems of the social organism — comparable to defense, welfare, conservation, transportation and communication. The medical function may be broken down or divided in various ways — preventive medicine, curative medicine, relating either to the individual or to the community. The health officer looks after the health affairs of the community — making it safe for people to inhabit, whereas the physician has the task of helping the individual to make his personal adjustment to his environment.

Dr. Means points out that as people we take it for granted that the government is considered responsible for the health of the community, whereas medical care of the individual is regarded as a function of the medical profession to be carried out by private enterprise on a voluntary basis.

Now we can all see very clearly that the health of the community is of vital importance to every individual member of the communi-

EXTRA ELASTICITY FOR DURABILITY

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

And then, our company and assistance needed more in another house than in that childhood home by the Strait, we returned to our former terrain. We were hastened somewhat by the signs of an approaching storm as displayed in the dull brooding of the day. The brother, too, having heard an ominous threat in the wind of the north east had hurried off in the twilight of the morning to his missions on the mainland.

Even to anticipate our route of travel which lay along treacherous icy ways was to wish heartily that we were already set down safely at road's end. But at length the distance between was measured away by the car-wheels and, quite unexpected by this family we were at home with them again.

It is, we think, a nice way to return, if only to see eyes light and smiles break in sudden and happy surprise at the unexpected sight. It was good too for us to have them come in to a house, not mostly cold and deserted but filled with cheer of fire-light, a singing kettle, and a meal appetizingly spread.

"This is good," the little lad smiled, "but," he added, "so were those we made for ourselves. . . I wonder if, in the morning you would remember to add more oatmeal than you usually do to the porridge? Our make, 'the chucked,' was much thicker than yours. In fact, 'he nodded,' you could eat it with a fork! But it tasted just great—and there was good last to it too. . . ."

We must, of course, be brought up to date on all the news of the place: We must hear of the ice-ponds in the fields, which in their off time had afforded them and Granddaughter excellent skating; that in school of late Gage is reading in the last book of the series for Grade 2; how well they had helped with the choring, assuming all the care of the poultry in our absence; and what a time they had helping their father lead a parcel of calves that had been tied here and there along the stable-group to the freedom of a box-stall some distance away. They told of the new litter of piglets that had come in the January cold and with "good luck" to Alderley; that the Nell-mare was to be shod "for these icy roads" and that by the signs of the times, so a little fellow said, — and how fascinating was this circumstance! "one day before too long, we just may find a new batch of kittens!"

And to "spell" the scanty supply of bread there were rolls to be mixed, and ends of the housework, that had suffered some lapse of late, to be spiced, to make the place tidy and comfortable again. . . . And we find it good to be back to the familiar hills, and the valley, to the stream winding darkly in its depths. . . . If at times the picture of an empty armchair comes to mind, it is to be ever grateful for lovely memories, grateful too that one of the best of parents had been lent so long to his children. And to remember that it is our duty to cultivate better and pass on down to our children's children the nice tenets of living he stressed and enjoyed. Thus loved ones "being dead, yet speaketh" to us and ours, adown many a year.

Top Parisian Designer Chooses Sheer Embroidered Fabrics

By Peggy Maslin

PARIS. (Reuters) — One of the largest high-fashion collections of the season was shown here Thursday by Hubert de Givenchy, now finally established as one of the top designers.

The man who a few seasons ago made Paris conscious of the elegance of ordinary matrons tickling for dresses and sportswear, this year leads the way in the opposite direction—to sheer embroidered fabrics which he designs himself.

He has chosen a "luck and happiness" theme for the designs — four-leafed clovers, silvery fish and tortoiseshell, lily of the valley and bamboo shoots. Fabrics of engravings picked out in jeweled beads, prints, inspired by the changing colors of a crystal chandelier, have been coaxed into beautiful ball gowns reminiscent of the dainty, shimmering creations which dotted the 18th century gardens of Versailles.

Slender Silhouette

One little evening dress is shadow printed in tones of grey and white, like an old engraving.

Givenchy has lined up with the slender silhouette bellies waistlines, long torso team. His waistlines are gently nipped in but loose enough to give an appearance of suppleness.

Detailed draping, such as pleats and folds, are reserved for the back. Suits, ready for summer, are often sleeveless. Giant collars, just out and away from the neck, are faced in white kid or straw. While his silhouette is much in line with the other leading fashion houses, Givenchy, who has a witty way with trimmings, has again come up with a few that can be easily and inexpensively copied.

He loops sashes with loose, open buckles, turns lacquered mistletoe leaves into miniature doll hats, freshens the little summer print with removable white organdie collars. Sprays of lily-of-the-valley or stiffened satin ribbon also become miniature hats.

Teapots

Often metal teapots will give a musty flavor to the tea if they are unused for some time. To prevent this, place a lump of sugar in the teapot before putting it away.

Custards

It is a simple method to smooth custard that has curdled if an egg is beaten, and then slowly beat the curdled custard into it.

Removing Paint

If paint or putty stains have splashed on the window panes they can be removed by rubbing them with hot vinegar.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Leo

Q. How can a hostess terminate an evening of bridge playing most gracefully, without giving her guests the impression that she wishes them to leave?

A. At the proper hour, and usually at the end of a game or rubber, she may begin her preparations for serving refreshments. The end of the refreshments is a good signal of the end of the evening.

Q. When should a woman remove her wraps when dining in a restaurant?

A. She waits until she is seated before removing her wraps, the waiter or one of the men in the party assisting her.

Q. How soon after leaving should a week-end guest write his "bread and butter" letter?

A. Within a day or two after his departure.

Better English

By D. C. Williams

1. What is wrong with this sentence: "When this fell beneath my observation, I was very surprised."
2. What is the correct pronunciation of "mania"?
3. Which one of these words is misspelled? Perennial, perdicament, perfunctory, perpendicular.
4. What does the word "sufficiency" mean?
5. What is a word beginning with li that means "a suit at law"?

ANSWERS

1. Say, "When this fell under my observation, I was very much surprised."
2. Pronounce ma-ni-a, first a as in main, and three syllables, not man-ya. 3. Predicament, 4. Competency. "The employee's sufficiency soon earned him a promotion." 5. Litigation.

How Can I . . .

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I cream butter quickly?

A. Heat the mixing bowl with scalding water. Wipe, and put in the butter. It will cream in much less time than required when the butter is put into a cold bowl.

Q. How can I make a task of washing greasy dishes much easier?

A. By dissolving a little washing soda in the hot water before washing them. The juice of a lemon is also good, and no soap is needed.

Q. How can I remove stains from marble?

A. By rubbing with vinegar or hydro-chloric acid. To remove all acid rinse with cold water.

Q. When should a woman remove her wraps when dining in a restaurant?

A. She waits until she is seated before removing her wraps, the waiter or one of the men in the party assisting her.

Q. How soon after leaving should a week-end guest write his "bread and butter" letter?

A. Within a day or two after his departure.
