CHAPTER EIGHT

Part Two

Rusty hesitated at the doorway and said awkwardly above Susan's head, "I don't know whether you will care about it, Malloy—"

"Celia's going isn't she? Then I'd care a lot about it," said Win in a tone that added as definitely as words could have done, "And that's that."

It seemed to Celia that the big old-fashioned room was filled with a conflict of personalities and ideas; though in reality there was no sound at all until she herself said hurriedly, "Susan, you run along and feed the pets while I pack a lunch."

"I'll go along and help her. With the menagerie she's got, it's quite a chore," said Rusty, and with Susan's hand in his he went out of the kitchen.

For a moment after the door had closed behind them Win stood looking down at Celia, and she had the craziest feeling of shyness as though she wanted to run away from him; but when he moved and took her in his arms she held her closely and kissed her, the shyness was swallowed up in a tingling ecstasy that was halfway between delight and pain.

"I'm afraid," said Win after a heady, excited moment, slipping his fingers behind her chin and lifting her face upward so that he could search her eyes, "that you've been a bad girl, my sweet!" "I don't know what you mean," she murmured ineluctably.

Win's head nodded toward the door that had closed behind Rusty, and he said softly, "You've been flirting with that young man haven't you? Aren't you ashamed of making a fool of him?"

Celia's color burned hotly and her eyes flashed with anger as she drew herself from his arms. "I haven't flirted with Rusty, and I can't quite see any girl making a fool of him," she protested. "He is—immune to women—"

Win tipped back his handsome head and laughed gaily. "Oh, my poor sweet!" he chided her intelligence gently, seeming to deny her the possession of any. "You surely weren't taken in by anything so—so corny as that? Why, it's plain as a pikestaff that the man is mad about you."

Celia said icily, "You are being very silly! Rusty and I are friends but not even old ones. I like him fairly well and he tolerates me—that's all!" "Getting breakfast for him every morning, and seeing him day in and day out, your feeling for him gradually changed? Win finished for her smoothly.

"All right, sweet I won't tease you. But you're mine now, and I won't stand for any monkey business—your hear?" Celia laughed at him. "That's the good old caveman approach is it? That sounds a bit funny, from you."

When she had packed the battered old wicker hamper that had seen many years of faithful service, because the Bartletts were a picnic-loving family, Win stood up lifted the basket and made a grimace. "We won't be gone for more than a week, will we?" he suggested.

"Don't worry about my having packed too much food. We'll all be starved by the time we get to Nisqually."

Beneficial Birds Studies by scientists of the Canada Department of Agriculture on natural control of insects, indicate that the predatory habits of birds may be the most important mortality factor in the overwintering larvae of the codling moth in Nova Scotia. In eight out of 39 orchards examined during November, birds had destroyed over half of the larvae.

Distance of the orchard from woodland where the birds are found, influences the amount of bird predation. In a direct comparison of 12 orchards, bird predation had increased from 23.2 per cent in 1950 to 30.2 per cent in 1951. Death caused by fungus diseases in 1950 was 3.1 per cent and in 1951 2.2 per cent.

key's Lake!" she assured him. He winced. "You're not going to Niskey's Lake darling?" he protested, as though he found the thought almost painful.

"It's the nearest lake that has any fish in it," she pointed out reasonably enough. "Oh, but look here why don't we drive across to Azalea, and on down to the dock where my boat's tied up? There's sure to be enough fish for the day, and we can go down river where Randolph and Susan can catch something really exciting."

When he broached the matter to Susan and Rusty, Celia saw the instant stiffening of Rusty's face as the protest rose in his mind; but Susan, saucer-eyed with excitement, fairly danced at the prospect of going out in a boat to fish!

NORTH BEDEQUE W.M.S.

The January meeting of the W. M. S. of North Bedeque was held at the home of Mrs. James Clark on January 3.

Mrs. J. K. Campbell conducted the worship service and singing. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, and the roll call was answered by seven members.

A business session followed during which it was decided to pack a box of food donations to send overseas.

The secretaries of the different branches each gave a very encouraging report of the year's activities. The W. M. S. Mission Circle, Mission Band and Baby Band, indicated all allocations exceeded.

Mrs. J. K. Campbell and Mrs. J. Clark were appointed delegates to attend the Presbyterian held in Charlottetown on January 22 and 23.

The February meeting will be at the home of the secretary, Mrs. Eric MacMurdo. The meeting closed with Mizpah benediction.

St. Charles Aux. Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the St. Charles Auxiliary of the Charlotte-town Hospital was held on January 13th with Reverend Doctor McMahon presiding.

The minutes of the last monthly and annual meetings were read and approved, and the president gave her report on the year's work.

This was followed by the treasurer's report given by Sister Mary of Good Counsel.

$3,512.23 was raised by the Auxiliary during 1951. Of this, $2,382.26 was given to projects approved by the Auxiliary.

At the election of officers which ensued the following slate was brought in: Honorary president, Mrs. J. J. Duffy; president, Mrs. Stephen Trainor, re-elected; vice-president, Mrs. John Coady; secretary, Mrs. Joseph Bradley.

Executive committee: Mrs. Emile Gallant, Mrs. Michael Conway, Mrs. Frank McGarron, Mrs. John Doyle, Mrs. Pictoria McCormack, Mrs. Joseph Costello, Mrs. John Pollard.

Sick visiting committee: Mrs. Walter Currie, Mrs. Emerie Holland, Mrs. Edward Connors, Miss Viola Tierney.

The president, Doctor McMahon, and treasurer thanked the members for their loyal and faithful work during the year. A card party, under the convensership of Mrs. Emile Gallant was arranged for January 19th.

First Aid classes for members of the St. Charles Auxiliary were organized. Course beginning January 17th.

Meeting adjourned with prayer.

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 25—(AP)—The Pope recently gave his apostolic benediction by telephone to his dying brother-in-law, Count Ettore Mengarini, Vatican sources said today. It was the first time a papal benediction had been given over the telephone. Mengarini died last week.

For Eczema—Itching Skin

Make up your mind today that you are going to give your skin a real chance to get well. Go to any good drug store and get an original bottle of MOONE'S EMERALD OIL—it lasts many days because it is highly concentrated.

The very first application will give you relief—the itching of Eczema is quickly stopped—eruptions dry up and scale off in a very few days. The same is true of Itching Toes and Feet, Barber's Itch, Salt Rheum and other skin troubles.

Remember that MOONE'S EMERALD OIL is a clean, powerful, penetrating Antiseptic Oil that does not stain or leave a greasy residue. Complete satisfaction or money back.

Air Force Woman Often In Arctic Supervises Food

SASKATOON Jan. 26—(CP)—Distant stations in the Canadian Arctic are just routine stops on the frequent trips made by Sgt. Agnes L. Campbell, attractive superintendent of food supplies for the Royal Canadian Air Force Air Transport Command headquarters at Lachine.

She's frequently off on expeditions to such places as Yellowknife, Frobisher Bay or White Horse to check on food supplies at the northern air outposts. Since 1950 she has been responsible for providing staple supplies and fresh food at stations that extend from Edmonton to Goose Bay and as far north as the Arctic islands. She also keeps a watchful eye on kitchen staffs and supervises the preparation of menus.

She spent four days in December at Resolute Bay on Cornwallis Island, but this is only one of the places visited in the past few years by the food expert, who comes from Wolseley, Sask.

Busy In Summer

During summer months, when Air Force photographic detachments go north, she is especially busy, for the mess facilities of each unit come under her supervision. She keeps in touch with the cooks to make sure they have a balanced supply of food on hand, and checks on the hundreds of details involved in serving appetizing meals to servicemen.

Most of her work is done at her desk in the air transport command here. She handles such orders as 50,000 pounds of fresh meat or 50 tons of staples, which much be packaged in special containers for their long journeys.

Fit-Lt. Campbell decided on the air force for a career in 1943, and after graduating from the University of Saskatchewan in household science, and a year's post-graduate work at the Vancouver General Hospital, she enlisted as a messing officer.

Before coming east she served at air stations in Rivers, Man., and Portage la Prairie.

ALL IN FAMILY GLADSTONE, Man.—(CP)—Mrs. R. J. McDougald of Plumas won the grand challenge trophy in the women's curling club bonspiel here by the narrowest of margins over her sister, Mrs. Percy Millions of Gladstone. The winning shot in the extra 13th end had to be measured before the result was known.

Jiggs Creator's Anniversary

This month marks the fortieth anniversary of "Jiggs and Maggie", George McManus' entertaining cartoons which have been running regularly in The Guardian for several years.

In commemoration of the occasion, Collier's Magazine is featuring the career of George McManus in a series of articles, of which the following is an excerpt from the cartoonist's own account of his achievement:

"I am not Jiggs. Maggie is not my wife. I have no daughter. These are answers to questions I am asked almost every day. Yet I think I may have become Jiggs. Or, if you like, Jiggs may have become me. They say if you live long enough with a person you come to look and act as he does, and Jiggs and I have lived together for 40 years—through 85,000 drawings of the comic strip 'Bringing Up Father'...

"In 40 years, Jiggs and I have grossed more than $12,000,000, with the help of Maggie, Dinty Moore, Glancy, Nora the beautiful daughter, and assorted other characters, including Mallethead, Maggie's peabrained brother, who pops up now and then under various other insulting names that Jiggs gives him.

"Twelve million is a nice round sum. It always impresses me. I work seven days a week, it's true, and generally eight hours a day; I usually am at my office by eight and never later than nine; I never have had a vacation in my life. But when I think of the investment in capital that would be necessary for such a return as twelve million, I am comforted. At 5 per cent, you'd have to have an original investment of $5,000,000 to get that sort of income. And if there had been a capital outlay of $5,000,000 40 years ago, I would have doubled that sum in profits alone, with my original investment remaining intact.

"But all I've had for capital is a retired hod carrier who has a fondness for corned beef and cabbage and for being himself. And a drawing board. I've never had a staff, although for the past 18 years I've had an assistant, Zeke Zekley, who helps me with the strip.

"It still amazes me. It seems not quite real, but there it is."
