Remember . . .

On this REMEMBRANCE DAY we recall with pride and gratitude the men who fell in two wars.

In times of world crisis the life of a nation may depend on the readiness of its young men to risk death in battle. In an ideal world that might not be true; but it has certainly been true in this disturbed era.

Canada, along with the other nations which twice challenged and defeated a dangerous tyranny, has reason for deep thankfulness to all its sons and daughters who suffered the miseries of war to keep their homeland safe and free.

The tens of thousands who died in combat left a memory which glows more brightly as the years pass.

Tomorrow is a day of remembrance as well as of rededication to the ideals for which many of our own youth of this City and Province fought and died.

loudly and invitingly than ever but Honker was heedless of it. He was leading up, up, up. When he stopped climbing high and straightened the line of flight it was not toward those others were still calling so invitingly.

What did it mean? In a few minutes they found out. They were no longer above the water. They had crossed the shore line. They were leaving that pond behind. Yes, sir, they were leaving that pond behind and there wasn't another pond in sight. Then she tongues began to be busy again and now there was no attempt to keep Honker from hearing now. There was no excited happiness in those voices now. Instead there was bitter disappointment. Some of the younger members of the flock were going back. But none quite dared do that. So Honker led his hungry, tired, disappointed followers in to the gathering darkness. It was quite dark when they reached a small pond and settled down too tired to even look for food.

"We Gave Our Today For Your Tomorrow"

Yes, tomorrow we will remember those of two generations who gave their today for our tomorrow. In the words of Laurence Binyon in his poem "For The Fallen".

They mingle not with their laughing comrades again;
They sit no more at familiar tables of home;
They have no lot in our labour of the daytime;
They sleep beyond England's foam.

But where our desires are and our hopes profound,
Felt as a well-spring that is hidden from sight,
To the innermost heart of their own land they are known
As the stars are known to the night.

The Victory Which Is Peace

When the Hand that sprinkles midnight
With its dust of powdered suns
Has hushed this tiny tumult
Of sects, and swords, and guns.

Then hate's last note of discord
In all God's world shall cease
In the conquest which is service,
In the victory which is peace.
