

WHO ARE THE GREAT?

TO ZADOC THE BEAR. Are they the class who in private pride pass...

ZADOC.—'Oh, never; they, whilst man is of clay, Become great as the wind is fanned.'

Are they the grade who whilst man and glad, And through many a deep tangled widow, Follow the chase like the lions of their race...

ZADOC.—'Oh never on that, whilst man is of clay, Become great as the wind is fanned.'

Are they the great, who in splendour and state, From their own homes to distant lands wander...

ZADOC.—'Oh they are the worst, on this earth of the crust, Who seek home that should they may equate.'

Who are the great, who like those who stand, Have no claim to the honor long paid them...

ZADOC.—'Whether brain or hand soil be their treasure— No matter their birth, they're king on the earth.'

Down deep in the mine where lamps dimly shine, Who look from the shaft to the world's domain...

ZADOC.—'And next minute in fire-gangs are sleeping— One of the most manly and heroic of men.'

Another class yet I must not forget, Who to science have laid with devotion...

ZADOC.—'But the greatest are those who make friends of foes, And who can feeling of wrong dolefully smother.'

And give, heart and hand, the poor of the land, If it can be done, the best of their aid...

ZADOC.—'We know of nothing in Mrs. S. C. Hall's "Tales and Sketches of the Irish Peasantry"...

FAT.—'I call myself a gentleman; and I don't care any more for the name of my profession.'

CLERK (not quite so urbane).—'Well, what is your name?'

FAT.—'My name is the same as my father's afore me, and would be yet, only he's dead.'

CLERK (decidedly angry).—'Confound you, what you tell me, and make me a fool of myself?'

CLERK (whit-phrased, he shruffles the letter).—'I'm ashamed of the name; it's "deals" to Barney, who "cuts"...
