

The CHARM OF BEAUTY

Not in the Features so much as in the Grace and Vitality of a Healthy Body—Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve and Blood Pills make Women Beautiful.

There's a certain charm of beauty in the graceful, elastic movement and clear complexion of a healthy woman in which the features do not play an important part. The pale, sallow complexion and dull leaden color of the skin, dark circles under the eyes, headaches, pains in the back and sides, dull eyes, weakness, nervousness, despondency and low spirits are symptoms of weak, watery blood and improperly-nourished nerves. No woman can be beautiful until the blood is enriched and the nerves strengthened. Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food is a food for the blood and nerves. Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food restores the energy and strength to a run-down system. Note your weight before using them, and the increase week by week as the brightness returns to the eyes, the color to the cheeks and the form round out with firm, healthy flesh, the natural result of rich, pure blood and a healthy nervous system. Face cut and facsimile signature of Dr. A. W. Chase on every box of the genuine. See a box, all dealers, or Edmansons, Bates & Co., Toronto.

A THREE BOTTLE COMEDY

By W. E. NORRIS

"—because those were not the reasons you gave at the time! I dare say I may enjoy a day with the bounds if we get a run, but I can't say that I am much impressed with the jollity of the company so far, and as for the ball—well, I really didn't come here for the pleasure of seeing you dance a dozen times with that stick of a girl."

"She isn't very likely to give me a dozen dances," Lord Arthur returned, "and I don't know what you mean by a stick."

Mrs. Naylor looked as if she would like very well to tell him one of the meanings of the word "stick," and even to show him one of the purposes to which that implement may be applied, but she only remarked: "I don't admire your taste. For the matter of that, I never did admire it very much, and I certainly never admired the outrageous color of Mrs. Alston's hair. I presume you are now convinced that I didn't traduce her when I told you that she dyed it. Sir Thomas Clutterbuck is convinced at all events, though he was an old goose to imagine that his little coup de theatre had a chance of coming off. Of course she wasn't going to show from the moment she realized those three bottles had gone wrong."

"Oh, you know, then?"

"I know there is a bottle of embrocation or some other nasty smelling stuff in my room, to which he is very welcome as soon as he likes to send for it. Perhaps he will then restore me my own bottle of physic, which seems to have gone astray through his stupidity."

"Hadden't you better apply to Mrs. Alston? Your property ought to be in her hands, ought it not?"

"I suppose so, but I don't particularly care about holding any communication with her. She is a nasty, ill-natured little cat, and she would be only to glad of some excuse for spreading false reports about me. I was thinking you might send her a message to say that the bottle was yours and that you would thank her to give it up."

"Oh, but then she might spread ill-natured reports about me, you see—that is, if the contents of your bottle are such as to give an air of probability to ill-natured reports."

"Nonsense! Who cares what reports are spread about a man? Now, mind,

"So you're to be congratulated, I hear."

I ask this of you as a favor, and I think, after the way in which you have behaved since you have been here, the least you can do is to oblige me in such a trifle."

"And suppose I decline?"

"If you do," answered Mrs. Naylor, making a mistake which, in view of certain previous passages between her and her interlocutor, was not wholly without excuse, "you may be very sure that I shall never ask another favor of you—or grant you one, either."

She did not, to be sure, know that he had first appropriated her liquor and then deprived himself of it by methods of which the memory still rankled in his mind. Still less could she have believed that the discovery of so venial a weakness on her part as a liking for caracoo had inspired him with a holy horror of her. She was therefore completely taken aback when he jumped to his feet with alacrity, saying:

"So be it, then! I'm sorry to appear disobliging, but really I have enough sins of my own upon my conscience without undertaking to bear the burden of other people's. I'm afraid I must decline to interfere, whatever the consequences may be."

With that he hastily withdrew, and Mrs. Naylor had the mortification of observing that he made straight for Annie Longworth. Perhaps she was not far wrong when she muttered despairingly: "Horrid young hump! He only wanted a pretext!" And without doubt she was right in concluding that she would merely be throwing away valuable time by devoting any further ingenuity to the enslavement of Lord Arthur Fulton.

Sir Thomas sent the remainder of Mrs. Alston's incomparable hair dye to her that evening with a note, upon the composition of which he expended much labor and which would have been more telling if it had not been quite so tremendously sarcastic. He himself received his red lotion from Mrs. Naylor, unaccompanied by any note or message, and thus he learned, with a certain unholy joy, that young Fulton had reduced his weight and diminished his staying powers quite needlessly. Thus also he was enabled to distinguish himself in the hunting field without fear of calamitous results to the mare and to forget for the time being the alteration in his appearance, which was dreadfully conspicuous by daylight.

Mrs. Naylor, on the other hand, did not distinguish herself that day. Whether owing to the lack of her accustomed modicum of stimulant or to the absence of any special motive for showing what she could do, certain it is that she allowed herself to be "stopped" at a brook by Miss Longworth, who rode with far less skill and judgment, but who had the courage of youth and ignorance, and shortly after that public humiliation she disappeared from view. Possibly, being a shrewd woman, she may have realized that there are contests in which it is useless to struggle against youth. Ignorance, too, is not without its advantages.

Now, Mrs. Naylor might, had she considered it worth her while to be malicious, have enlightened Annie Longworth's ignorance with respect to Lord Arthur's career and its episodes; but, upon the whole, it seemed equally easy and more sensible to rest satisfied with the discomfiture of Mrs. Alston and accept her own less conspicuous defeat philosophically. Returning early to Newton Longworth, she sought an interview with her hostess and stated, with much apparent regret, that she had just received a telegram which would necessitate her departure before the ball.

"Oh! Must you go?" exclaimed good-natured Mrs. Longworth in honest distress. "This is really becoming a sauve qui peut! First Mrs. Alston, and now you! I suppose the next thing I shall hear will be that Sir Thomas Clutterbuck has decided to desert us."

"I shouldn't be surprised," said Mrs. Naylor dryly.

And indeed before the day was over Sir Thomas justified anticipation by following suit. He came in half an hour before dinner, smothered in mud and quietly triumphant, having demonstrated to his juniors that he could still ride as straight as any man of half his age, but he was not eager to compete with the young people in a field where gray hair is heavily handicapped and where hair which has been obviously robbed of that respectable hue places its owner under a double disadvantage. He wished, moreover, to get up to London as soon as he could and consult experts with a view to the recovery of his normal aspect.

So of the four travelers who had journeyed down to Newton Longworth together only one remained in the house 86 hours after their arrival, and if he did not consider himself an uncommonly lucky fellow that was only because no one ever does appreciate unmerited luck. To have been set free at a blow from the entanglements of two formidable ladies—for both Mrs. Alston and Mrs. Naylor were very formidable, and he was no match for either of them—might in truth have prompted him to return thanks to his guardian angel, but he was for the moment too much overcome with admiration for Annie Longworth's pluck—not to speak of her other attractions—to have any room left in his mind for reflection upon the perils which he had escaped. This was the third brush that she had won that season, she told him, and he obtained leave to have it mounted for her.

It was some months after these events that Lord Arthur, turning out of his club in Pall Mall, ran against Sir Thomas Clutterbuck, who said:

"So you're to be congratulated, I hear. Well, she's a nice girl, and if a man must needs marry I don't know that he could do better than choose a girl of that sort. For my part I've come to the conclusion that the less one has to do with women the more likely one is to enjoy life. It's possible to get along quite comfortably without 'em, I can assure you. Been consulting any more amateur vets lately?"

Lord Arthur made a retrospective grimace. "I haven't had occasion to do so, I'm thankful to say," he replied. "Have you been making any more experiments in the hair restoring line?"

"My dear fellow, you wouldn't believe what a job I had to get rid of that infernal stuff! The end of it was that I was obliged to have my head shaved and go off on a sea voyage for three weeks. However, I'm my own master now, anyhow, which is more than can be said for you. I think, Fulton, we may as well draw a decent veil over the episodes of our visit to your future wife's family. It makes a good story, I admit, but one isn't justified in telling tales about ladies, you know."

"I suppose not," answered the other, guiltily conscious of having already told his future wife all about it. "Goodby!"

And if they are diseased use the world's greatest kidney cure

TEST THE KIDNEYS

Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

It's a simple matter to test the kidneys. You need not consult a doctor. By asking yourself three questions you can determine whether or not your kidneys are deranged.

First: "Have you backache, or weak, lame back?"

Second: "Do you have difficulty in urinating or a too frequent desire to urinate?"

Third: "Are there deposits like brick dust in the urine after it has stood for twenty-four hours?"

In its earlier stages kidney disease is readily cured by a few boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, a preparation which has made Dr. Chase famous throughout the world for his wonderful cures of diseases of the kidneys.

If you have kidney disease you can take Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with perfect confidence that what has proved an absolute cure in so many thousands of cases will not fail you.

So long as the cells of the kidneys are not completely wasted away, as in the last stages of Bright's disease, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will give them new vigor and strength and make them strong, healthy and active. One pill a dose, 25c. a box, at all dealers, or Edmansons, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Brought Forward Flavors

Few people enjoy the flavor of garlic with plum pudding.

It is impossible to wash chipped cooking utensils thoroughly clean—consequently yesterday's ingredients flavor to-day's dinner when such utensils are used. The
