

Boston Bruins Overpower Injury-Riddled Rangers

BOSTON (AP)—Boston Bruins dazed New York with three first-period goals, two by Don (Slip) McKenney, and opened the gates for a 5-0 victory Saturday night in their Stanley Cup semi-final series.

The outcome of the jarring contest sent Boston into a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven competition.

Boston goalie Don Simmons, who had been out with a shoulder injury much of the time since Dec. 29, turned in his third playoff shutout in his two years of National Hockey League action. Simmons, who registered five whitewash jobs in his abbreviated season, made 28 stops as compared with 31 for New York's Lorne (Gump) Worsley.

The Rangers, winners of the first game in the series, overplayed their rough tactics and were short-handed for each of the first three tallies.

Defenceman Doug Mohs of the Bruins connected first on a well-screened 20-footer which never left the ice at 9:24. The Rangers' Bill Gadsby was sitting out an interference infraction.

McKenney, a lean hockey merchant from Smiths Falls, Ont., got the next two while Jack Evans was off for five minutes for slashing the Bruins' top scorer Bronco Horvath, who was sent to hospital.

Evans banged Boston's 30-goal scorer over the head with his stick and Bronco fell in a bloody pool with a laceration which penetrated to the skull bone. Later reports revealed Horvath would be all right.

Chubby Buddy Boone got the fourth Bruin goal in the middle period when he lifted a Mohs rebound into the nets. Boston's only shot on the New York net in the first half of the final period was a goal by Norm Johnson, a 25-footer which Worsley caught but couldn't hold.
