THE STORM.

Through the bleak waste of waters a ship struggles on
'Gainst the wind and the tempest she battles alone,
The wild waves toss madly their white caps on high—
Through clouds dark and angry frowns down the dark sky.
At the helm stands the captain, his eyes through the gloom,
See naught but eternity's ghastly gates loom;
Prayers, curses and moans to the tempest are cast,
While the shrieks of the heart-broken cut through the blast.
On she struggles; but Hope's gentle flame in each breast
Lies withered and dead, while by terror caressed,
Jack Despair onward stalks in her ghastliest form
To gather those hearts from the arms of the storm,
The wild angry ocean her gaping mouth opes,
And the thunder in rage with its mighty power copes,
While mad roars the storm, and the flood-gates of Heaven
Pour down as of old on a world unforgiven
All hearts quail in terror as Death grasps the helm
And steers through the storm for his own ghastly realm.
Through rocks and o'er shoals till the brave bark lies shattered,
And fond hearts, like chaff, to the wild waves are scattered
Earthly storms surge as wild o'er our care beset souls,
And weary our voyage o'er bleak rocks and shoals.
But a beacon of hope brightly shines through the gloom,
From the great gate of Heaven beyond the dark tomb.
And we'll follow it until, we soar like the dove,
And rest our glad hearts by the bright throne above.

ESPERANCE.

The Old Army Trunk.

(From The Collegium)

FROM away back in the misty by-gone days the following remarkable incident presents itself to my mind in startling vividness. As near as an imperfect memory can produce, the story runs thus: "During one of my excursions through the northern part of England, I alighted one evening at the depot of a small country village. The first thing that claimed my attention was the enthusiasm with which a large number of people of every description, were scanning a rather portentious looking document posted up near the courthouse. When I managed to get within reading distance, I perceived that its import was perfectly harmless. It announced to the world, only the sale of several old army trunks, to take place on the morrow. Thinking nothing more of the affair, I proceeded to my hotel, went through the usual routine and retired. Sleep immediately transported me into dreamland, Visions most fantastic presented themselves to my astonished gaze. Army trunks of every size, shape and color instantly surrounded me, walking, jumping, rolling, flying and playing leap-frog, with as much dexterity as Gabriel Grubb's church-yard visitors. Their manœuvres seemed to be directed by one old trunk of much greater dimensions than any of his companions. He always managed to remain near me, and was continually beckoning me to join in their sport. Their revels had lasted for a considerable time, when a strain of sweet music summoned them from my presence. They vanished with the same confusion in which they appeared. The music became louder and more distinct, and finally I realized that I was being awakened by the breakfast bell. Was it any wonder, then, that afrer a night of such romantic occurrences, I was anxious to witness the sale of my nocturnal visitors.

Almost the first thing I saw when entering the auctioneer's room was the identical trunk that had marshalled his fantastic brigade the previous night. My curiosity was now thoroughly aroused. Needless to say that it was my intention to purchase the trunk. The auctioneer knocked it down to me for a mere trifle. I had it removed to my room. On examination it was found to contain military accoutrements of various kinds, some jewelry, and several packets of papers. Among the papers I found a letter sealed and bearing the following inscription:—To the purchaser of this property. With intense eagerness I tore open the envelope and drew therefrom the following letter, having neither address nor date: To the reader: I enjoin you to follow minutely the instructions contained in this letter. Go to the old stone church situated at the west end of the village of C——. Then take the road leading north for the distance of two miles. Here you will find another road crossing it at right angles. Turn to your right and go due east for half a mile. Here you will find the remains of an old forge, and further back, sheltered by a small grove, you will see all that may remain of a once happy homestead. In front of the house a gigantic oak extends its mighty arms over the scene of my childhood's happy hours. At the foot of this tree on the side facing the west you will find buried to the depth of three feet, a large stone jar. Therein is contained all my wealth. This is to be disposed of as follows: One hundred pounds to be expended for the spiritual welfare of myself and my family. Moreover, a suitable monument is to be erected in the graveyard near by, bearing the inscription enclosed herein. You will fine the grave immediately at the west sidp of the cross standing in the middle of the cemetery. The remaining portion of the money is yonr own.

(Signed) R.—— K——.

After reading this curious letter, my first impulse was to get some friend and proceed immediately to the place indicated, as I was in the very village mentioned in the letter. But, on second consideration, I resolved to go about the matter quietly and alone, lest the whole affair should turn out to be a hoax. Accordingly, after dinner, I left word at the hotel that I was going for a stroll into the country, and then I proceeded on my somewhat novel mission. I had no difficulty in finding the road. Coming to the cross roads I turned as directed I soon came to what I considered the place so minutely described in the letter. All that remained of the forge was a few stones confusedly heaped near the roadside. Across the stone wall the marble cross in the graveyard extended its arms to heaven. An old cellar indicated where once stood the house; but nowhere could I see the tree. I espied an old stump in which was sticking a rusty spade. As the stump was located where the tree was mentioned to have stood, I concluded that I had found the desired spot. Fixing a handle in the spade, I began digging. After twenty minutes hard labor, I concluded, by the number of blisters on my hands, that I must have gone beyond the depth of three feet, but no trace of the jar could I find. Was I victimized? Plunging the spade once more into the damp earth, I struck something hard. Soon was disclosed to view the outlines of a large stone jar. With little difficulty I removed the earth from around it, lifted it up, and placed it on the ground. I now proceeded to examine its contents. The money it contained was all in coins—sovereigns, crowns and half crowns, of different dates. On counting it, I found that, after fulfilling the conditions injoined in the letter, I would have left a sum sufficient to relieve me from all anxiety in regard to my future welfare. The stated sum was immediately given to the priest in the village of B— to be expended in saying masses. I then went to Liverpool, purchased a suitable monument, had the proper inscription placed thereon, and returned to see that it was placed in the proper location. The latest recollection I have of this remarkable occurrence, is the intense delight with which I assisted at the first Mass celebrated for the repose of the soul of my departed benefactor.

15 Years of Itching.

Wm. Golding, commercial traveller, 130 Esther st, Toronto, Says: For 15 years I suffered untold misery, sometimes called pin worms. Many and many weeks have I had to lay off the road from this trouble. I tried eight other pile ointments and so called remedies with no permanent relief to the intense itching and stinging, which irritated by scratching would bleed and ulcerate. One half a box of Chase's Ointment cured me completely.

WATERPROOF YET POROUS.

Admits the air and keeps out the water. . . . .

This may seem an impossibility but it can be explained. The RIGBY process renders the fabric a non absorbent and a repellent to water. It makes the material so that it will shed water like a duck's back, otherwise it is not changed in appearance or feeling. It permits the free respiration of the skin, and at the same time keeps you dry.

ODDS AND ENDS

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Oct. 2.—Commodore Curzon Howe, commanding the cruiser Cleopatria, telegraphed from Sonne Bay that the steamer Mariposa is still hanging on the rocks, while several steamers and cruisers are engaged in taking out the cargo for salvage. She is only supported on the rocks by half her length, but if she does not go to pieces, nearly all the cargo except the grain will be saved. The officers of the cruiser Buzzard contradict the sensational reports of piracy by the Newfoundland fishermen, which are being circulated in the foreign press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 2.—The thirty-six triennial convention of the Protestant Episcopal church of America was begun at 11 o'clock this morning with a solemn ceremonial. Admission to the service was by ticket only, and but 1,500 tickets of admission to Gethsemane were issued. At the appointed hour the house of bishops gathered at Knickerbocker Memorial hall and formed the procession. The long line of bishops, clad in their rich vestments and degree hoods, was headed by Bishop E. B. Mill-paugh of Kansas, the junior bishop, his apostolic brethren following in the order of their consecration, and the rear being brought up by Bishop Whipple of Minneapolis, the senior bishop and the presiding officer. With Bishop Whipple in the place of honor were the visiting Canadian bishops.

INTERESTING INTERVIEW.

An American will make Arrangements with a Canadian Firm.

OTTAWA (Special) Sept 30.—An American who has been here interviewing the members of the government on private business, has left for Toronto, where it is understood he will try and make an arrangment with the Dodd's Medicine Company of that city for the establishment of a manufactory of Dodd's Kidney Pills in New York State. He declined to specify the locality. During his stay in Ottawa he has been investigating the now celebrated case of G. H. Kent, who was saved by this remedy when in the last stages of Bright's disease, and has satisfied himself of the genuine nature of the case. He asserts that the medicine is now universally used throughout the state.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—A despatch from Cape Town says Bishop Maples, of Nyassaland, and a companion were drowned in Lake Nyassa, Sept. 12, and that Mr. Attlay, missionary, was recently murdered on the Zambessi river by natives. Mr. Attlay's body was recovered.

Why Contemplate Suicide.

It is like tempting Providence for consumptives to ignore the remarkable remedy known as Miller's Emulsion of Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. For any person to die of consumption without trying this remarkable flesh and blood maker, after knowing of its existence, is suicide pure and simple All that the consumptive patient needs is new blood with which to battle against the destructive forces of the disease. Miller's Emulsion provides new blood in abundance. It is a combination of Norwegian Oil and hypophosphites of lime and soda—a triumph of science Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all lung affections. ROME, Oct. 2.—This being the 25th anniversary of the plebiscite in papal territories on the question of union with the kingdom of Italy, in which 133,681 votes were cast in favor of union to 1,507 in opposition, the government has decided to grant amnesty to all persons guilty of having evaded military service whether such persons are undergoing punishment at home or have taken refuge in foreign countries.

C. Donnelly, prop. of the popular and well-known Windsor Hotel, Allison, Ont. was troubled for years with Itching Piles. He was persuaded by Jas. McGarvey, Allison, livery man, to use Chase's Ointment which he did, was cured, and had no return of them and highly recommend this Ointment as a sovereign cure for Piles.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Numerous wrecks are reported from the Bristol Channel and other points along the west coast of England. Altogether, 19 steamships and large sailing vessels and 27 smaller craft are reported to be lost. Although only 18 lives are known to have been lost, it is feared that many more sailors and fishermen have lost their lives, as the coasts of Devonshire and Somersetshire are strewn with wreckage.
