A Feature For Every Friday Among The Farmers Federation Of Agriculture News

The Leaf Turns

A certain indication that summer is past and preparations for winter in order, is the turning of the leaves from their summer green to the almost countless variety of gold, brown, crimson, yellow, and scarlet that we see today.

The absence of general frost and high winds is leaving the trees clothed with foliage later than usual, but nevertheless, the leaves are living on borrowed time.

Potato digging with its quota of sore backs and big appetites is now general with reports indicating a variety of results from heavy to light, sound and otherwise.

Some harvest still remains in the fields and corn is being ensiled by the larger growers or shocked by those who have a small acreage.

It is likely that the report of the Massey Commission and in particular the recommendations referring to Canadian radio will be receiving the attention of the present session of Parliament.

There is apparently a concerted effort with considerable organization back of it to curb the power and authority of the Commission which controls Canadian radio.

The present Commission is responsible to Parliament, hence to the Canadian people, who we maintain have every right to come say in how this very important educational and cultural medium shall be regulated.

It is hardy to be expected that complete agreement will be achieved between private stations and the publicly controlled CBC, but we fail to see how the independent commission suggested in the Surveyor Minority Report could either do a better job for the public or improve conditions for the private stations.

The management of private stations in this province has been public spirited and their policy indicates a high sense of responsibility.

The support which the CBC has from rural people in this province can in no way be considered as expressing criticism or dissatisfaction with the co-operation and assistance afforded by P. E. I. radio stations.

Beef or Dairy

Profitable beef prices and labor difficulties have resulted in a marked trend on the part of farmers to use more beef bulls even in some of our better dairy herds. While future prospects for meat prices appear to be good, yet in the past the beef business has been characterized, by more violent fluctuations than in the dairy industry.

The farmer who stays with his dairy herd has more than one string in his bow, a steady cash income from the sale of milk or cream, a valuable by-product to feed other livestock, the sale of breeding stock or commercial cows and last but not least, good disposal values for beef or surplus steers and no longer useful cows.

While the consumer has always placed greater value on cream than on the solids not-fat and perhaps looked on the latter as a by-product of doubtful value, yet due to the reluctance of the buying public to pay prices for butter which would return the cost of production to the dairymen and the improbability of the producer continuing to produce at a loss, we foresee that the line of the milk below the cream line may eventually become the more highly regarded portion of the milk and the butterfat become the by-product or it's use confined to those who have a keen understanding of nutritive values and who recognize real value when they see it.

Income Tax Guide Many of our farmers have had occasion to study and make use of the Guide for the preparation of income tax returns supplied by the Department of National Revenue. What most farmers may not realize is that their own organizations, the C.F.A. and the Provincial Federation is consulted yearly in the preparation of the Guide and suggestions coming from the Provincial offices considered and changes based on these made.

Price Control President, H. H. Hannam of the C.F.A. in speaking at Milton, Ontario, on September 20th outlined the attitude of organized agriculture on the question of price control.

Mr. Hannam made it clear that any attempt to apply control to food prices without dealing similarly with wages and profits would provoke strong resistance from rural people.

That Mr. Hannam's remarks carried weight and are considered by the government is proven by the fact that in a recent speech, the Hon. Mr. Abbott quoted facts and figures from Mr. Hannam's address.

Most of the clamor for price control is coming from organized labor who itself would be most reluctant to accept wage freezes. Continuous demand for increased hourly wages on the part of labor is in no small part responsible for increased cost of farm production, increased cost which in many cases the farmer must absorb in lower cash returns for his own labor.

From the Toronto Globe and Mail we quote a recent editorial which is worthy of some consideration: "People dislike paying for the necessities of life, such as food and rent. That is why they are always demanding that the price of these things be controlled, or that they should be subsidized out of taxes. . . . Never before have Canadians had so much money and never before have they frittered away so much of it on things that are not essential. No doubt there are many Canadians who find it difficult to buy the necessities of life. But the great mass of our people could easily afford life's necessities simply by cutting down on their luxury spending. It is not the high cost of living that is causing most of the trouble today, but the cost of high living."

It is true that the farmers are getting good prices for what they produce, and benefiting from a shortage which is not wholly of their making. None the less they must work for what they get and they must work a good deal harder and longer than labor works for what it gets. Clear proof of this may be found, if any is needed, in the steady drift of young people from farm to factory. It might be noted, too, that the farmer does not enjoy any real security. Today, he is doing well, but tomorrow may be another story. Frost, drought, surpluses, can all knock the props from under him. There is no guarantee he will always have a market; there is no guarantee he will always have a crop.

On balance, it would not seem that the farmer in Canada today occupies any specially privileged or profitable position. He is simply sharing the nation's general prosperity, and it is a good thing that he does; because if he wasn't prosperous, he would certainly be unable to buy the commodities made by labour at its present wages, its present hours, and its present level of productivity.

Farm Forum This year Farm Forum begins on Monday, October 29th and groups which have been active in the past three years will be contacted in the near future from the Forum office.

This year's program will be divided into five series of four broadcasts each. Series one on Co-operatives, second on Community Living, third on Farm Policy, fourth on Marketing, and the fifth on International Relations.

Communities which organize a Forum and individuals who participate can be assured of profitable and pleasant evenings by meeting with their neighbors in organized study and for the development of community life.
