Entertainment at Souris.

A Souris correspondent forwards the following: St. Dunstan's College Dramatic Club, accompanied by their band, visited this town on Thursday evening last, and presented "Falsely Accused," a drama in four acts, remodelled and adapted from Hazelwood's "Waiting for the verdict." The play is a pathetic one, though much amusement is furnished by a pair of "eccentric sports." The caste of characters was well chosen, and the players acquitted themselves creditably. Want of time prevents my criticizing the individual performance of the actors. However, I think the murder of Lord Elmore by Jones, who is in the woods was cleverly done. The villain and victim showing no little talent. The part performed with artistic dramatic effect was the prison scene in the third act, where the part of Jasper Rosblac, the "falsely accused," was performed in a manner that would throw many a professional in the shade. Everything passed off smoothly, not the least pleasing feature being the music by the orchestra between the acts. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, the hall was crowded to excess, and something over sixty dollars realized. Should the college again visit us they will be greeted with a full house.
