Steel Production Continues Low During March

CLEVELAND, (AP) - Magazine Steel reported today that March has failed to live up to advance hopes of being a good steel month and the production rate has been lower than in January or February. Last week the ingot rate declined for the third straight week, sinking to the year's low point of 68.5 per cent of capacity. The week before it had been 70. Steel posed the question of which way production will go from here and said: "There are indications the automakers, the largest users of steel, may raise their steel orders this month. On the other hand, some
