

INSIDE

Dead Letter Office.....2

Cool Love.....3

News

Computer Rooms closing early, no one will take the blame; Sara Murphy investigates.....4

Forced withdrawals at U.N.B..4

Budgetary Concerns; a U.P.E.I. student seeks access to the Student Union's books.....5

Space Moose, Bad.....5

Black Panther says youth not radical enough.....6

Are Canadians ever taxed?..6

The P.M. faces off with protesters over free trade.7

Op/Ed

Politics.....8-9

The People vs. The Govt....9

A & E

Pete Seeger Interview....10-11

An evening with Kim Stockwood.....12

Album Reviews.....13

Best of the 1990's..... 14

Commentary on UPEI men's basketball.....15

Fact & Opinion.....16

The Vaults.....18-19

Herescope.....20

Dead Letter Office

Stupid Answers to Snappy Questions

Dear DLO:

I was just wondering why the heck the Cadre was not published on October 26th. I mean, the October 19th didn't mention anything about there not being a paper for the next week. I at least expected the November 2nd issue to provide some sort of explanation. Alas, it was not to be found. Indeed, the Editorial seemed to mention just about everything except why there was no Cadre the week before. There are some things we come to expect from a weekly newspaper and one of those things just happens to be that it should come out every week. I'm beginning to think that the Student Union should stop funding all the campus media.

-Tracey Flick

Dear Tracy:

Sorry about the lack of issue on the 19th; I'm surprised anyone noticed. Chalk it up to inexperience. It won't happen again. Now as for the SU cutting off of funding for campus media; well, Tracy, maybe you should change your name to shithead so no one gets you confused with all the other Tracys in the world.-Ed.

Dear Editor:

If the Cadre wasn't free, I would ask for my money back. Last week's (November 2) edition was the worst this year! You mentioned in your editorial the "profound regret" you felt after the publication of each issue. Well, I profoundly regretted reading that last issue. The first couple of issues had some promise, but you blew it! I mean, aren't newspaper supposed to carry news? Almost everything in there was either opinion or complete and utter fiction. Anybody can make up stories, but it takes real TALENT to find interesting and factual ones.

Max Fischer

Dear Max:

Don't give up yet Max; we're going to blow the lid of several of the critical issues on campus, as soon as we find anyone who cares enough about them to surface. Oh yeah, and maybe you should change your name to Tracy, so no one gets you confused with all the other Maxs in the world.-Ed.

Dear DLO:

I was quite dismayed when I read that the by-election only had an eight percent voter turnout. As a concerned student, I tried my hardest to convince as many people to vote. I was so sure there would be a better turnout just from my contribution alone. I, too, must attribute this atrocity to poor advertising. Although I did know that there was an election, I was not aware that there was a debate. I was really looking forward to a speech from John Fleming, who was the only man brave enough to give an interview with the Cadre. I applaud Mr. Fleming and everything he stood for and I am saddened to see that he was not the winner.

Robert Paulson

To who it may concern:

I just got back from that English department shindig and it was quite a shindig! There was lots of food and pop! I almost busted a gut from drinking too much cream soda! All the professors were really nice and helped me a lot. I almost decided which section of English 101 I will take next semester. As a fourth year business student I am happy that there are really nice people in other departments who are really nice to me and to help me. In conclusion, I just thought that everybody would like to know that.

Sincerely,

Adam Gallant

And they say business guys are boring.-Ed.