CHAPTER LIII.

At last she was relieved from a most embarrassating situation by old Wardlaw, he cried out on this moroply, and Helen instantly darted out of her chair, and went to him and put up her then check to him, which he kissed; and she thanked him warmly for his courage in not despairing of her life, and his goodness in sending out a ship for her.

Now, the fact is, she could not feel grateful; but she knew she ought to be grateful, and she was ashamed to show no feeling at all in return for so much good, so she was eloquent, and the old gentleman was naturally very much pleased at first, but he caught an expression of pain on Arthur's face, and then he stopped her. 'My dear,' said he, 'you ought to thank Arthur, not me; it is his love for you which was the cause of my zeal. If you owe me anything pay it to him, for he deserves it best. He nearly died for you, my sweet girl. No, no, you mustn't hang your head for that neither. What a fool I am to revive old sorrows! Here we are, the happiest four in England.' Then he whispered to her,
'Be kind to poor Arthur, that is all I ask.
His very life depends on you.'

Helen obeyed this order, and went slowly back to Arthur; the sat, cold as ice, on the sofa beside him, and he made love to her.
She scarcely heard what he said, she was asking how she could end this intolerable interview, and escape her father's looks, who knew the real state of her heart.

At last she rose, and went and whispered to him:

'My courage has failed me. Have pity on me, and get me away. It is the old man; he kills me. At one.'

General Rolleston took the hint, and acted with more tact than one would have given him credit for. He got up and rang the bell for tea; then he said to Helen,
'You don't drink tea now, and I see you are excited more than is good for you. You had better go to bed.'

'Yes, papa,' said Helen.

She took her candle, and as she passed young Wardlaw, she told him in a low voice, she would be glad to speak to him alone to-morrow.

'At what hour?' said he, eagerly.

'When you like. At one.'

And so she retired, leaving him in ecstasies. This was the first downright assignment she had ever made with him.

They met at one o'clock; he radiant as the sun, and a rose in his button-hole, she sad and somber, and with her very skin twitching at the thought of the explanation she had to go through.

He began with amorous commonplaces; but she stopped him gravely. 'Arthur,' said she, 'you and I are alone now, and I have a confession to make. Unfortunately, I must cause you pain—terrible pain. Oh, my heart flinches at the wound I am going to give you; but it is my fate either to wound you or to deceive you.'

During this preamble, Arthur sat amazed, rather than alarmed. He did not interrupt her, though she paused, and would gladly have been interrupted, since an interruption is an assistance in perplexion.

'Arthur, we suffered great hardships on the boat, and you would have lost me but for one person. He saved my life again and again; I saved his upon the island. My constancy was subject to trials—oh, such trials! So great an example of every manly virtue forever before my eyes! My gratitude and my pity forever pleading!
England and you seemed gone forever.
Make excuse for me if you can. Arthur—I—I have formed an attachment.'

In making this strange avowal she hung her head and blushed, and the tears ran down her cheeks. But we suspect they ran for him, and not for Arthur.

Arthur turned deadly sick at this tremendous blow, dealt with so soft a hand.
At last he gasped out, 'If you marry him, you will bury me.'

'No, Arthur,' said Helen, gently, 'I could not marry him, even if you were to permit me. When you know more, you will see that, of us three unhappy ones, you are the least unhappy. But since this is so, am I wrong to tell you the truth, and leave you to decide whether our engagement ought to continue? Of course, what I have owned to you releases you.'

'Release me! but it does not unbind my heart from yours,' cried Arthur, in despair.

Then his hysterical nature came out, and he was so near fainting away that Helen sprinkled water on his temples, and applied eau de Cologne to his nostrils, and murmured, 'Poor, poor Arthur! Oh, was I born only to afflict those I esteem!'

He saw her with tears of pity in her eyes, and he caught her hand, and said, 'You were always the soul of honor; keep faith with me, and I will cure you of that unhappy attachment.'

'What! Do you hold me to my engagement after what I have told you?'

'Cruel Helen! you know I have not the power to hold you.'

'I am not cruel; and you have the power.
But oh, think! For your own sake, not mine.'

'I have thought; and this attachment to a man you cannot marry is a mere misfortune—yours as well as mine. Give me your esteem until your love comes back, and let our engagement continue.'

'It was for you to decide,' said Helen coldly, 'and you have decided. There is one condition I must ask you to submit to.'

'I submit to it.'

'What, before you hear, if?'

'Helen, you don't know what a year of misery I have endured, ever since the report came of your death. My happiness is cruelly dashed now, but still it is great happiness of comparison. Make your conditions. You are my queen, as well as my love and my life.'

Helen hesitated. It shocked her delicacy to lower the man she had consented to marry.

'Oh, Helen,' said Arthur, 'anything but secrets between you and me. Go on as you have begun, and let me know the worst at once.'

'Can you be very generous, Arthur?— generous to him who has caused you so much pain?'

'I'll try,' said Arthur, with a groan.

'I would not marry him, unless you gave me up; for I am your betrothed; and you are true to me. I could not marry him, even if I were not pledged to you; but it so happens, I can do him one great service without injustice to you; and this service I have vowed to do before I marry. I shall keep that vow, as I keep faith with you.
He has been driven from society by a foul slander; that slander I am to shift and con-fute. It will be long and difficult; but I shall do it, and you could help me if you chuse. But that I will not be so cruel as to ask.'

Arthur bit his lips with jealous rage; but he was naturally cunning, and his cunning showed him there was, at present, but one road to Helen's heart. He quelled his torture as well as he could, and resolved to take the road. He reflected a moment, and then he said:

'If you succeed in that, will you marry me next day?'

'I will, upon my honor.'

'Then I will help you.'

'Arthur, think what you say. Women have loved as unselfishly as this; but no man, that ever I heard of.'

'No man ever did love a woman as I love you. Yes, I would rather help you, though with a sore heart, than hold aloof from you. What have we to do together?'

'Did I not tell you!—to clear his character of a foul stigma, and restore him to England, and to the world which he is so fitted to adorn.'

'Yes, yes,' said Arthur; 'but who is it?
Why do I ask, though? He must be a stranger to me.'

'No stranger at all,' said Helen; 'but one who is almost as unjust to you as the world has been to him;—then fixing her eyes full on him, she said, 'Arthur, it is your old friend and tutor, Robert Pen-fold.'
