

MR. AND MRS. HARRY WEEKS
50th Anniversary Marked
By Fredericton Couple

50th Anniversary Observed
 The home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Weeks, Pleasant Valley, was the scene of a happy gathering on November 10th, when relatives and friends assembled to honor Mr. and Mrs. Harry Weeks, Fredericton, on the occasion of their 50th Wedding Anniversary.

The couple were married by the late Rev. L. J. Leard at the home of Mrs. Weeks' parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Sharpe, Pleasant Valley. Their attendants were Leslie Weeks and the late Agnes Sharpe. Mr. and Mrs. Weeks retired from farming at Elliot's Mills, 15 years ago and moved to Fredericton where they are both enjoying good health and take an active part in church and community affairs. They have a family of four children, Miller, of Pleasant Valley, Lewis of Hunter River, Reginald of Sydney, N.S., and Eileen (Mrs. Robert Shaw) Summerside, and they also have five grandchildren.

Rev. William E. Hare spoke on behalf of the congregation of the Pleasant Valley United Church and called on Mrs. Frank Cutcliffe who read an address and a gift was presented by Donald Barlow. Presentations were also made from the Sunday School by Mrs. Wendall Craswell and Mrs. Milner Hill and from the Church Choir by Mrs. William Stevenson and Milton Weeks. The couple were presented with a gift from the residents of Fredericton Community by Mrs. Aubrey Cutcliffe and Mrs. Herbert Buchanan. And many gifts were received from their family and friends. Mr. Weeks, on behalf of his wife, expressed deep appreciation for the kindness and thoughtfulness of all those who

MARY HAWORTH
Career Woman Is Upset
By Extravagant Friend

Dear Mary Haworth: I am 33 and have been courting a man now 40, for nearly five years. We agreed to wait until he finished a belated college course before marrying. Financial hardships befall him and I helped out...

On completing the course he is no more the answer to his dream of a car for $5,000. Now he is considering the purchase of an expensive boat. We were planning to marry next month but I feel like calling it off. The boat would leave us no money to live on decently. We would be existing hand-to-mouth for the next three years.

I have some savings which he expects me to invest in the boat and I have refused. I am primarily interested in investment property at present, perhaps a small four-unit building where

ELLEN'S DIARY

The Short Days Speed Quickly On Their Way

Rain washed down a window, so often peacefully against the bright morning sky were being worried by a passing breeze when we came to the dawn's light today... It would seem there is no rain more sober than that which the Fall's clouds let fall. It is in tune with the season's call of the wild geese, with a slight of the cows coming down the lane from the fields, in the early evening to shelter, and the lonely cawing of a single crow along a hilltop. Spring-time rain is bright, full of promise; warrens of meadow flowerings are in it, of morning dew and purple dusks, and that blue veil of haze which at far horizons scars the summery days.

However it is starlight we now have, and the moon glow so pretty over the farmlands. And lights blossoming across the fields from homes up the valley and afar. And indoors, here by the fireside, there is silence. It is broken only by the rustle of the farm-paper, James reads, the crackle of the burning sticks on the hearth, the tick of the old clock on the shelf and the sleepy purr of the white kitten on the couch.

"I'm wondering," Alex started a train of thought, today, eyeing this same kit-out with some speculation, "What?" Peter questioned, all ears to catch the words this elder brother of his lets fall. "Would it be that we might have some woolly white kittens some day?" he queried. "Peter grinned." Do you know, I've been wondering about that myself! We just never can tell the animal.

Sunshine and shadow—this was our day. Sun on the heels of the showers. As are, it comes to mind, our lives: bright when our paths are fair, dreary when shadows chance to lie across them, though sooner or later brightening again. Life to us is a reminder of a road we sometimes must wade alone in our girlhood, when returning from work. It was then a lonely by-road, nevertheless a very lovely and quiet way. Its course ran (and runs) where "back forties of lengthy farms meet, where for a distance no dwellings are in sight. Woodlands attended it in places, and road-side trees, often leafy strewn that sunny way with fetching signs of sun and shade. At times we walked wholly in shadow, when high branches over-arched, from which we came to the brilliant sunlight of a summer day. So it has been since with life, and will ever be: The sunshine of the fair times with hopes and hearts high, and then the shadows of disappointment and hope deferred, of sadness along the length of our way.

Now the short days spend away quickly. Winter's face we see in some cold massed cloud. Christmas nears. School concerts commence to shape up.

"Hi Alex! How are you?" a caller to the yard today greeted the only man in sight at the time. "I'm Peter," Alex's in school! "I'm Peter," he grinned. James looks up, smiles, and returns to his reading. For the time our shadows flee. And sunshine over all, we see.

Until tomorrow... Diary...
 Goodnight.....

MENU Magic
 from the TEST KITCHEN

Festive Fare
 'Round the Bureau Kitchen we've been thinking of Christmas for some time now. For Dairy Foods lend themselves naturally to festive dishes with the special homemade flavor and holiday flair that adds to the merriment.

Open House
 Delicious agnogn, sold already to serve, makes it easy to welcome friends in large numbers. It's really just a matter of adding a festive touch or two to the punch bowl and cutting some of your very best Christmas cake to go along with it.

Orange Nog
 For the younger set, try an orange version of the traditional eggnog: Combine in a large bowl 2 (6-ounce) cans of concentrated frozen orange juice, and 1 quart of milk. Beat well to mix, then add a quart of prepared agnogn. This makes enough for two dozen callers.

Morning Treat
 While overnight guests enjoy the luxury of "sleeping in", you'll have plenty of time to fix Holiday Waffles. They're just ordinary waffles topped off with hot cranberry butter. For six, heat together 2 cups cranberry sauce and 1 cup butter, sweetening if necessary with a little brown sugar. Good on pancakes too, so take your pick!

For the Wee Folks
 Cheese sandwiches for lunch are tops with the wee folks and tops with Mom too since they're so good nutritionally. Cookie cutters transform them quickly into Christmas treats that tell of more good things to come!

Pass the Pudding
 Deck the Christmas Pudding this year with Holiday Hard Sauce. Divide your regular hard sauce in half and tint red and green. Shape into small bricks, and press together to make a large one. At serving time top hot Christmas pudding with a slice of colored sauce and drizzle with warm vanilla sauce. Looks pretty as the colors melt and mingle!

Ice Cream Snowballs
 Parties for the youngsters anytime of the year call for plenty of ice cream. For added Christmas fun roll scoops of ice cream in flaked or shredded coconut and press a small red cake candle into each one. Store in the freezer. Do be sure to dim the lights when you're serving them.
