

MR. AND MRS. EARL CRANE

Autumn Ceremony Is Held In Cherry Valley Church

Cherry Valley United Church was the scene of an early Autumn wedding when Norma Perle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm M. Irving, became the bride of Thomas Earl Crane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Crane, Vernon.

The church was decorated in Autumn colors, with an arch of marigolds zinnias and ferns under which the bridal party stood. Baskets of yellow and white gladioli decorated the front of the church and guest pews were marked with pom dahlias in Autumn shades, maidenhair fern and white satin bows.

Rev. W. E. Grant performed the double ring ceremony, assisted by Rev. A. E. Percy. Arlene MacDonald, guest soloist, sang "The Wedding Prayer" prior to the ceremony, and "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register. Mrs. W. J. Mutch was organist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white brocade satin with bateau neckline, fitted bodice and lily point sleeves. The skirt featured fullness at the hipline, and had a waist-line bow at the back. Her four-tier veil of tulle illusion had a scalloped edging and was held in place by a jeweled headpiece. She carried a white lace covered Bible topped with a spray of yellow roses, lily of the valley and fern, and streamers of white satin-ribbon with yellow rosebuds.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was her sister, Verna, and her bridesmaids were her cousin, Arlene Clow, and Gwynneth Jones. The three attendants wore, respectively, yellow apricot and green identical floor-length gowns of crystal charm, styled like that of the bride. Matching bow and net headpieces completed their costumes. They carried cresents of shasta daisies.

Earlth Mutch, the flower girl wore a floor length gown of yellow crystal charm, with matching bow and net headpiece, and carried a basket of shasta daisies.

David Jones was the ring-bearer. Mrs. Irving chose for her daughter's wedding a suit of blue jersey with a matching blue feathered hat, black accessories and a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Crane, mother of the groom, wore a red wool suit, black accessories and a corsage of white roses.

A wedding reception for 115 guests was held at the Canadian Legion, Charlottetown. Ivan Kerry was the master of ceremonies and W. Blair MacDonald proposed the toast to the bride. Beverly Hayden was in charge of the guest book.

For a honeymoon trip to the New England States, the bride wore a burgundy wool knit suit matching velvet hat, and black and white accessories. Her corsage was of white roses.

The bride is on the office staff of DeBlois Bros., Charlottetown and the groom is employed with Maple Leaf Mills, Ltd.

ELLEN'S DIARY

This Weekend Brought Many Family Reunions

So here was today, yesterday's tomorrow, come by in its turn, after the holiday weekend, a day in the new of the week. . . . The holiday will have occasioned its accidents, that sad toll of the roads, which is tragic, though seemingly unavoidable, until folks have learned to observe faithfully a number of rules in regard to their own and others' welfare. It is a great pity that despite wide highways, and by and large, good visibility death and destruction - dead and injured, and property damage - is the toll exacted from holiday, and indeed other, weekends. And accordingly, homes are left sorrowful where happiness had been.

We think of those homes privileged to have had no such shadows over their rooftops on Thanksgiving Day, happy to have the missing members back to the family and table again. How good their day was! We recall that Peter pleased with the once more complete circle of parents and children at the house across the lane, stopped a moment at this door on entering to look off to the valley where the autumn shades ran brightly in fencerow and wood.

"You know," he said, "the Thanksgiving time is not like Christmas or Easter, I mean there are no gifts. But," he smiled, "it comes at a pretty time of the year, and there's something about it I like."

"Perhaps toward evening we may get some straw baled, if things dry," Mack offered this morning noting the reach of blue sky, the sunshine on the fields, and the stirrings of the breeze in the lawn trees. "Meanwhile," he grinned, "we won't be out of work! That's something a farmer never has to worry about: he's never out of work."

a job, is he? We'll go at our building and I'd say, we just might get that roof shingled today."

"It would be good to get it done, to have it ready for the bales we want to store there," his grandfather said.

"We'd like . . . but what do you have in the way of food?" Peter inquired this afternoon, come by with Gordie, Jamie's eldest.

"Apples . . . bread and butter . . . and . . ."

"That's it!" he looked to Gordie for his approval, "we'll have sandwiches!"

"And would you put down the teapot?"

"I'd like my sandwiches cut like pieces of pie," Gordie said. "They always taste better that way."

"What! Reading? Retired from active service, I take it?" one of the family chuckled, some by later.

"Not exactly," we grinned. "Just reading a bit while waiting for the lye to cool before we stir it into the melted fat of soap in the making." One of the late Louis Bismarck's books it was, he that farmed scientifically and most successfully, it would seem - in a state to the south. And loved the land, and the farming as a way of life, and wrote descriptively and charmingly about it.

"Bed, Ellen!" James queries finger on the latch of the stair-front door.

"Presently," we say. . . . We remember that only a chapter remains now to be read. If we do not follow it to the end, we shall feel that this day, so good to the folks of this farm, in that a roof was shingled, and bales of straw made and brought in, has been for us incomplete.

Until tomorrow - - Diary - - Good-night. . . .

Doyle-Miller Wedding Held In Tignish

In a recent wedding at St. Simon and St. Jude R. C. church Tignish, Rosetta Rachel Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Miller, Charlottetown, was united in a double ring marriage ceremony to Mark John Doyle son of Mr. and Mrs. James Doyle of Tignish community. Rev. Francis Tardiff was the officiating clergyman.

Given in marriage by her grandfather, Louis Harper the bride wore a long white gown of satin with a front and back panel of lace, and lace bodice with lily point sleeves. Her finger-veil was held in place by a crown of sequins with pearl tapers. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Claire Doyle, sister of the groom, was maid of honor in an ankle length dress of pale blue, with dark blue net panels floating at back, a matching bow headpiece and veil, and carrying a nosegay of mixed flowers. Christine Doyle, also a sister of the groom, was bridesmaid wearing an ankle length dress of deep turquoise with floating back panels of light blue net, and matching bow and veil headpiece. Her nosegay was of mixed flowers. Cathy Ann McAleer and Holly Perry, cousins of the bride were flower-girls - dressed in white silk organza and carrying baskets of mixed flowers. The ring bearer was little Harley Perry.

Ralph Miller brother of the bride was best man. Ushers were Edward Doyle, Roy Doyle, and William Doyle, brothers of the groom.

Following the ceremony a dinner and reception were held at the Legion Home, Tignish where the bride's mother received wearing a gown of blue floral jersey with white hat and accessories and a corsage of white carnations. She was assisted by the groom's mother who chose a gown of turquoise blue with white hat and accessories, and a corsage of white carnations.

Rev. Francis Tardiff proposed the toast to the bride. Leaving for their honeymoon to Boston, Mass., the bride wore a powder blue boucle suit with wedding ring collar of pale blue fur, white picture hat, white accessories and a corsage of blue and white carnations. The new-weds will reside in Tignish.

very tactfully let her know that we love her very much, want only what is best for her, and her. I fear that I am not so diplomatic and perhaps my criticism may alienate her.

In such a situation, should the parents frankly state their convictions? Or sit by and hope for the best? Sincerely, E.E.

Dear E.E.: If one's parents aren't one's friends, what are they for? And if friends can't be trusted to give honest answers to searching questions, what good are they?

Your daughter has asked what you think of Joe as a prospective husband for her. In my view, you owe her an honest answer, as tactfully worded as possible. If the substance is negative: but in any case the truth in a nutshell as it seems to you.

As of today, you are trying to devise a precautionary, all-purpose answer to her questions; an answer guaranteed to keep you off the hook, figuratively speaking, insured against falling into disfavor with Kay, regardless of how she resolves the marriage offer.

In short, you are asking which cards to play so that you won't have forfeited "closeness" to Kay in the event she decides to marry Joe despite neutral to negative family reactions. Or, in the event she decides to renounce him, in timid though possibly unforgiving compliance with her parents' lack of enthusiasm.

I consider this calculated behavior, aimed at indirect manipulative control of Kay's reflexes in relation to you, on an implicitly dishonest basis, in the sense that you aren't being open above-board with her, in spirit.

Unfortunately, a half truth of that sort may be a bigger lie than a falsehood cut from whole cloth.

So much for preface. My advice is, don't sit back and hope for the best. Rather, know what you think and let it be known to those who have a right to know. Adolescents respect truth from parents and value it as a living perspective, even if they go against parental counsel.

Years ago, a college girl of my acquaintance said to her mother—both being strong, outspoken, often dissenting debaters—"Mother, you are the rock in my life." What she meant was, "I can know where you stand; and, knowing that, I have at least one abiding point of reference in sorting things out."

MARY HAWORTH

Parents Don't Approve Of Daughter's Young Man

Dear Mary Haworth: Our daughter Kay, who has been considerably brought up, is now a senior in college.

She is dating and becoming seriously interested in a young man whom we think isn't good enough for her. I don't mean financially or socially, but in terms of spiritual caliber.

Joe, I'll call him, is intolerant of many minority groups, where Kay is open-minded. He isn't particularly thoughtful in association with her, not in his manners towards us in our home. Joe's parents are college graduates, but I understand that his mother has worked since he was in the early grades of school; and this may account for his latterday behavior, since he hadn't the moderating influence of a mother's continual guidance.

In any case, my husband and I think Joe isn't the right man for a suitable mate for Kay. To his credit, however, he is industrious, intelligent, of good appearance.

Since they are talking of marriage, Kay has asked our opinion of Joe. My husband, bless him,
