Regardless of the presence of Carl, Bryan exclaimed:

'Faithful still! The fiercer the storm, the closer does her generous love cling to me!'

'Will you meet her?' asked Carl.

'Without fail.'

CHAPTER VI.

THE NEW PRISON.

The proclamation of Hans Van Kempen caused a great excitement in and around the settlement of Van Kempen's castle. The fermentation was greatly increased, however, upon the morning following its promulgation, for then a company of workmen presented themselves in the village, and commenced the foundation of an immense log pile, the uses and intentions of which was mysteriously hinted at, but not definitely explained

Peter Schnapps punctual to his promise with Bryan, visited the Whig brotherhood of the region, and detailed to them the advice and arguments of his young friend. Many at first demurred to it, but at length they were convinced that it was not only the safest policy, but all the policy they could pursue.

Accordingly, they repaired in a body to Van Kempen's castle, and complied with the stipulation of the tyrannical heir.

This conduct on the part of those whom he knew to be opposed to the king, and ardent republicans at heart, completely surprised Hans Van Kempen.

What could it mean? Was he again to be deprived of his vengeance? Was it possible that Bryan Blonday would yet continue to elude the nets he had set for him.

One thing afforded him satisfaction; Bryan had not yet made his appearance — had not yet subscribed his name to the roll, or taken the oath. If he would only procrastinate until the expiration of the day of grace. Hans determined to arrest him

'Aye, by G—d!' exclaimed Hans, thinking upon the matter. 'I'll not only arrest him, but I'll hang him!'

And he derived infinite satisfaction from these conclusions.

In the meantime, the immense log building in the settlement progressed rapidly Hans superintended the work in person, and under his direction every point was amply fortified, and rendered as strong as art and timber could make it His delight in surveying it, seemed to increase as it ascended higher and higher every day.

To all enquiries concerning the uses to which he intended to devote it, he returned an evasive answer, merely alleging that time would disclose all things

With anxiety that increased every hour, and that finally became painfully intense, Hans watched the flight of time. Bryan Blonday did not appear to take the required oath, and to make the required enrolment How earnestly the Patroon hoped he would not.

'Fool!' that I was,' he would exclaim, mentally 'had I only inserted three days in my proclamation my pretext to execute him would now have been clear enough!'

Occasionally he saw Bryan in the street He was the same self-possessed, calm, pale, quiet personage of former days, and he no more heeded the presence of the landholder than the veriest cur that barked at his shadow.

This conduct galled Hans to the quick. Such thorough contempt for the heir of the Van Kempen estate was unendurable and it aroused all the passions of the Patroon

When Bryan separated from Carl, on the night of the proclamation, he repaired at once to the grove, where Viola had appointed the meeting.

She had not yet arrived when he reached the spot, and he seated himself by the bank of the river, and gave himself up to the gloomy reflections that thronged upon his mind, in spite of all his efforts.

A sight of the familiar objects around him increased his sadness Not a stone, tree, or shrub but had witnessed his happiness — had been present when he was joyful and rejoicing in the love of his mistress. Now he had come to meet her again, and perhaps for the last time.

He was about to separate from her, and try his fortunes in the rugged path of war.

Bryan was not kept long in waiting In the midst of his melancholy reflections, Viola entered the grove and every mark of care and anxiety vanished from his features at once In a few moments he was seated beside his mistress, again pouring forth the tale of his love.

'This is very kind,' he said; 'without this interview I should indeed be wretched. Of course Carl informed you that it would be the last I should request of you?'

'The last, Bryan?'

There was a touching earnestness in the girl's tone, as she asked the simple question

'The last,' said Bryan; 'at least for a long time.'

'Explain yourself.'

Bryan told all.

The bright tears streamed down the cheeks of the fair girl, as the youth recounted the persecution of Hans ... the ...

'Is it possible,' she said, 'that my cousin is so base, so lost to every sense of honor?'

'It is true.'

'And what will it avail him?'

'Rid him of the presence of a rival.'

'Believe it not, Bryan,' exclaimed the girl, eagerly; 'your image is enshrined where Hans Van Kempen cannot reach it. Though a thousand miles separate us, you will be ever present to my heart, and there Hans Van Kempen, with all his power, cannot be admitted.'

Bryan clasped the girl to his bosom, in a transport of gratitude.

'Then,' he said, 'you say truly, all his machinations will avail him but little.'

'If he was not a fool, he would abandon such measures.'

'Love has blinded his judgment.'

'Love indeed!' exclaimed Viola, with a scornful curl of her beautiful lip, 'rather say his avarice.'

'Well, his avarice, then, if that pleases you.'

'But you will not be long absent?'

'God only knows The fate of war above everything else, is uncertain Perhaps, dearest, I never shall return'

'Say not so, Bryan. I am sure you will return, and with a wreath of glory.'

The youth smiled. For a moment visions of glory, chivalrous deeds and mighty battles, filled his bosom and dazzled his judgment, but fate whispered that the road to these tempting situations lay through blood danger, and hardship, and that to secure them, he must separate from all he held dear on earth.

He derived no satisfaction from the anticipation.

'Fortune directs us all,' he said, 'and it is perhaps the greatest blessing conferred upon man, that the future is withheld from his examination My love of country alone leads me to the battle field'

'And that is a holy motive, and cannot but be blessed,' exclaimed Viola, tenderly pressing his hand

The night was far advanced before the lovers separated. When at length they did part, it was with tears and promises of eternal constancy on both sides. The faithful Carl was at the gate to admit Viola; and Bryan did not leave his position, near the grove, until it had shut the form of his mistress from his view.

Then he turned, and sought the inn of Peter Schnapps

It was not until several days after this interview that Bryan completed his preparations for departure One morning, he descended into the bar-room and after informing Peter that he was ready for his journey, he ran down to the little cottage, so dear to his heart to bid a farewell to Fielding and his excellent wife

The meeting was a protracted and very painful one and the parting was productive of great misery Bryan at length tore himself away, and again repaired to the inn for his clothing, which he had prepared for the occasion. Peter was alone when he entered.

'Now, Peter, my good friend,' he said, approaching the publican, and extending his hand, 'I must separate with you, and then I hope the pains of leave-taking are over!

Peter received the proffered hand and bestowed upon it a most nervous gripe. His voice faltered as he said;

'Then, Bryan Blonday, you are going?'

'I am.'

'Well, God bless you and prosper you. You have a generous heart, Bryan, a noble heart! You will never lack for friends. Have you not confidence in me to tell me your place of destination? It would gratify me to know.'

'To be sure I have. I am going to Fort Stanwix'

'What?'

'To Fort Stanwix.'

'Indeed!'

'Yes It is the nearest military station, and they are in want of men. The Tories and Indians are threatening to infest it, and Ganesvoort, the commander, has called in the militia to his aid.'

'Then you will cross the river at the ford below?'

'I shall.'

'I will accompany you thus far, and see that you are over. It shall not be said that you left like a thief.'

'Thank you,' replied Bryan.

And the friends left the inn, and proceeded down the river, some two miles or more, to the ford Schnapps had alluded to.

The Most Reliable Friend!

Holloway's Ointment,

Its Searching & Healing Properties are known and recognized throughout the World.

The number of years this invaluable Ointment has stood the test of public opinion, (and the longer known the better appreciated) is a testimony of itself more convincing than anything that could be written in praise of its truly wonderful healing properties. In the cure of bad legs, bad breasts, sores, wounds, and ulcers, its effect is marvellous. For ring-worm, scald-head, scrofula, and diseases of the scalp generally, there is no remedy to be compared to it. When assiduously rubbed upon the skin (previously well bathed in warm water this Ointment is quickly absorbed into the system, and cleanses, in its passage, every part to which it is applied.

Glandular Swellings, Mumps Bronchitis, Quinsey, Sore Throats and Diptheria.

In any of the above diseases, immediate and permanent relief is obtained by effectually rubbing this detergent Ointment, twice a day, upon the neck, chest and back Its acts upon the very mainsprings of life; for through the glands pass all new matter required for the body's reparation and all old particles detrimental to its preservation. The Ointment, used conjointly with Holloway's Pills, will act so searchingly and certainly as to effect cures in the most hopeless cases.

Rheumatism, Lumbago, Contracted and Stiff Joints.

Many thousands of martyrs from the above complaints have found life almost unsupportable; yet if Holloway's Ointment be briskly and perseveringly rubbed upon the parts affected, ease may be safely guaranteed, especially if the pores of the skin be previously opened by fomentations with warm water The gross humors require expulsion from the system; it is therefore necessary to have recourse to Holloway's admirable Pills, which, by purifying and strengthening the system, greatly assist the operation of the Ointment and facilitate and confirm they cure

Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, and Ulcerations of all kinds.

There is no medicinal preparation in the world which may be so thoroughly relied upon, in the treatment of the above ailments, as Holloway's Ointment Nothing can be so simple or safe as the manner in which it is applied, or its action on the body, both locally and constitutionally. The Ointment, rubbed around the part affected, enters the pores just as salt enters meat. It quickly penetrates to the source of the evil and drives it from the system.

Erysipelas and Scrofulous Sores

In all irritations of the skin, sores, ulcers, burns or scrofulous enlargements of any kind, Holloway's Ointment presents a ready and easy means of cure. It manifests a peculiar power in restraining inflammation, removing stagnation, cooling the heated blood, and checking all acrimonious and unhealthy discharge.

Diseases attendant on Childhood.

Diseases incident to early life fall more under the management of the mother than the medicine man Holloway's Ointment should therefore be regarded by her as a "Household Treasure," as it never fails in bringing out the rash in measles and scarlatina; and for the removal of all skin diseases its effect is miraculous In cases of whooping cough and croup, this invaluable Ointment should be rubbed twice a day upon the throat and chest, and the youngest invalid will derive therefrom the most soothing relief. Two or three of Holloway's famous Pills, reduced to a powder, will augment the curative powers of the Unguent.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases:

Bad Legs	Corns (soft)	Rheumatism
Bad Breasts	Cancers	Scald Heads
Burns	Contracted and Stiff Joints	Sore Nipples
Bunions		Sore Throats
Bite of Moschetoes and Sand Flies	Elephantiasis	Skin Diseases
	Fistulas	Scurvy
