ELLEN'S DIARY

Brave And New Morning Is Garded And Gilded

"Human nature is 'p's a' in g' that we observe in the way in which we are when he stopped by the hills where we pottered this morning.

"She's a fine animal!" James had remarked, stopping to take a last look at her.

"Well" we chuckled, "let's put this way for it's an intimate subject. Which would be better, to take the bare bones of a record for a wife as you say 'alive and complaining', or to lay an impressive wreath of compliments on her?"

"Exp'lain your way, Ellen!" James said, we fancied a little wryly.

IDA A BAILEY ALLEN

Texas Onions Are Here With Their Fine Flavor

A COLORFUL red-black-and-beige mess bag, tied in a rickety black cord, arrived from Texas.

The flavor is so gentle, they combine with meat, poultry or fish without overbearing the natural flavor.

They are wonderful, steam-fried to serve with a smoky meat, or sauteed in pork chops or steaks.

MARY HAWORTH Confused Image of Self Is Inept Person's Trouble. Dear Mary Haworth: My problem may seem commonplace, but it is serious to me. I don't know how to carry on intelligent conversation. People seem to think I am overly concerned when I try to discuss a subject. Consequently I have difficulty expressing myself. I am still stouter. And my nervousness increases when I try to please everyone, which is impossible. I long for a happy, warm, outgoing personality. Some people seem to think that everything I say has an undertone of self-pity. Maybe it does; but how can I change this? Another thing: because of a hearing loss I find myself speaking so softly that people can't hear me; they strain to listen. They think I am all around me, and I am not.
