

More Workers Absorbed By Canadian Economy Now

By JOHN LeBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer
OTTAWA (CP) — The rising Canadian economy is absorbing more workers than ever before. Government estimates released Wednesday indicated an all-time high of 6,206,000 persons at work in July, up 153,000 from the previous peak in June.

However, the decline in unemployment was far behind the number of new jobs, moving down only 6,000 to 228,000 as an unusually large number of students and other workers flooded the labor market.

With the labor force going to a high of 6,434,000, the July total of jobless looking for work was just 1.5 per cent, lowest in about three years.

It was 3.7 per cent in June with 234,000 unemployed out of a force of 6,287,000 and four per cent a year earlier when those available for jobs numbered 6,314,000.

FEWER LAYOFFS

Besides persons without jobs, there were 12,000 on temporary layoff in July, a slight drop from June and down 7,000 from the previous July.

With the estimate of actual unemployment, the government released figures showing that at July 16 National Employment Service job registrations were 291,513 compared with 320,927 a month earlier and 412,362 a year before.

The bureau of statistics figures are reached in a monthly sampling of 30,000 households.

In employment, the bureau estimated, about two-thirds of the increase came through seasonal increases in farm jobs.

Between June 20 and July 18, these jumped from 731,000 to 835,000. However, farm employment continued to lag behind the 1958 figures in continuance of a downward trend in this field over some years. Farm employment in July of last year was 851,000.

Non-farm employment in July moved up to 5,371,000 from 5,322,000 a month earlier. This compared with 5,172,000 in July of 1958.

SERVICES UP

The estimated increase of 199,000 on the year in non-farm industries, the government said, mainly came about in the services industries and, to a lesser extent, manufacturing, trade and transportation.

The only major region in which employment dropped between June and July was the Atlantic provinces, where it fell off 3,000 to 530,000 persons. It was an increase, though, of 12,000 from July, 1958.

Reasons given by the government were that seasonal slackening in fishing, fish processing outweighed seasonal expansion in farm employment.

DOGIE SWIMS FOR TEN MILES

SOUTHWICK, England (AP) — A fisherman found a cheerful little pekinese churning through the waters of the English Channel three miles from shore.

"I couldn't believe my ears when I heard a dog bark," said angler Charlie Bailey. "There wasn't another boat in sight."

Bailey retrieved the peke from the briny and took it home. It was claimed Monday by Mrs. Irene Coleman of Thornton Heath.

She said the dog apparently fell overboard about 10 miles out when she and her husband made a sharp about-turn in their cruiser, Cherokee.

The peke, 3, is named Miracle.
