NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

United States.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.
Encouraging reports come from Memphis this morning. The fatal cases yesterday numbered but 28, a decrease of 13 from the previous day. The general feeling is said to prevail among the physicians there that the crisis has passed, and that the worst is over.
The situation at New Orleans remains about the same as Thursday. There were 64 deaths and 177 new cases reported yesterday.
The mortality at Hollysprings, Miss., is said to be appalling, and a change for the worse has taken place at Vicksburg and other points in that vicinity.
Another call for aid has been made by the Howard Association at Vicksburg.
The Mayor and Health Officers of Louisville, Ky., deny that the yellow fever exists in that city in epidemic form. There have been but a few isolated cases, and these of an indigenous character. The general health of the city has seldom, if ever, been better.

Europe.

PESTH, Sept. 30.
The Radical Hungarians held a mass meeting here to-day to protest against the occupation of Bosnia. Defulires Kely and Simeoni, the leaders of the movement, and many other members of the Hungarian Diet, were present at the meeting, which was largely attended.
Resolutions were unanimously adopted declaring the occupation of Bosnia by the Austrians fatal to the Hungarian nation, and protesting against the sacrifice of the blood and money of the Hungarians against their wishes, and demanding the withdrawal of the army from Bosnia.

The Afghanistan Trouble.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 27.
Novoe Vremya reports that Lord Salisbury has asked the object of the Russian mission to the Ameer of Cabul, and what position Russia intends to assume regarding Afghanistan.
The Globe says this report is probably correct, but needs confirmation. It thinks Russia will reply that she does not feel bound to explain the object of the mission, and that in event of a war between England and Afghanistan she will observe the same degree of neutrality as was observed by England during the late war between Russia and Turkey.

LONDON, Sept. 28.

The "Post" says: "We believe intimation of more or less value has already been made to England of Russia's intention to immediately recall her mission from Cabul.
A Berlin despatch states that Russia will permit her merchants and manufacturers to sell arms and ammunition to both English and Afghans in the pending war.

Some Grit Telegrams.

Under the heading of "That Fatal Night," the Toronto Mail has the following:—
The following telegrams are said to have passed over the wires about midnight on the 17th inst.:—
John Gilmore, Detroit:
John, you needn't come along. We have busted.
J. MADIVER.
Hon. R. J. Cartwright, Nanpanee:
I couldn't do it. They wouldn't mesmerise for me. Guess they wouldn't for you, either.
S. SIMPSON.
Cooper, Fairman & Co., Montreal:
I've concluded to retire from the business, owing to prevailing depression.
C. MCKENZIE.
Adam Oliver, Town Plot:
Cover up your tracks and come home. Burn the old hotel and trade the lots off for a graveyard. The firm is dead.
P. J. BROWN.
Hon. A. McKenzie, Ottawa:
See Lamentations, iii chap., 49 v.
E. B. WOOD.
Hon. G. Brown, Bow Park:
The bell is pealing,
And every feeling
Within me responds
To the dismal knell:
Shadows are trailing,
My heart is bewailing
And tolling within,
Like a funeral bell.
J. D. EDGAR.
President Reform Association, Ottawa:
G. R. PATTULLO.
Night Editor, Globe:
Only a moral victory for me.
A. H. DYMOND.
T. McCrosson, Tribune:
Too full for utterance.
J. D. MERRICK.

Mexican Affairs.

We have mentioned more than once that there was a possibility of a war breaking out between the United States and Mexico.
It would seem that there are parties in Washington who are endeavoring to bring about such a conflict. A Washington despatch to the Boston Advertiser states that these parties who are interested in making trouble with Mexico are boasting among their friends that at last they have so enlisted the prominent officers of the administration as to insure active steps against that country at no very distant day. Strong efforts have been made for some time to induce some of the principal members of the administration to believe that war with Mexico would be popular in the United States, and especially at the South, and do much to unite those who fought against each other. It is also urged that the large acquisition of territory which would follow a successful war would give the administration much reputation in its closing days. While those who desire trouble in order to favor schemes of their own are likely to overrate the influence they suppose themselves to have at the State Department and in other quarters, there is no denying the fact that they have good grounds for a part of their belief.
There are three parties vigorously at work in this matter; first, an influential railroad combination in New York, some of whose members have the ear of the State Department at all times; second, a ring largely interested in Mexican claims; and a third, the Texas border politicians and their allies.
The general public in the United States certainly desire no war with Mexico just now, and would be prompt to punish those who would heedlessly bring one on. It is to be hoped that the latter will be disappointed in their designs.

The Low Class Undertakers of London.

A London correspondent of the Dublin Freeman says: "The revolting disclosures made from time to time in connection with low-class undertakers in this overgrown city suggest that a strict system of inspection should be applied. I do not hesitate to say that the present lax system as to the burial or disposal of the bodies of infants leads directly to crime. It certainly, in many cases, must lead to the concealment of birth; but take the ordinary case.
What is the practice here as we now hear it described? A child is stillborn. The doctor gives his certificate, and the services of an undertaker are called in. A respectable and feeling man will secure a respectable undertaker, and personally see to the burial; but there is just the danger. Not long ago a scandal arose in connection with a London undertaker named Burridge.
Several infants were found crammed into a coffin with the remains of a pauper adult which he had been given to bury. The unusual weight of the coffin attracted attention, or for some other reason it was opened, and the discover was made. What became of this case I do not know, but it turned out that Burridge—who denied, indeed, that he was aware of the conduct of his men—was a very wealthy person, and very high up in a business which should be sacred, but which is sometimes rendered odious in the case of the poorer classes.
After the remains of the little one are reverently laid in their shroud the undertaker kindly offers to give the parent 'no more trouble.' This, of course, may be a great temptation to poor people. The husband has his day's work to do; the wife is ill. The tiny coffin disappears, and the parents are assured it was duly interred in the cemetery. The chances are ninety-nine against one that the undertaker, on reaching his domicile, reopens the coffin and places the fragile body in a big box, in which there are other similar fragments of mortality quickly resolving themselves under the influence of quicklime! These are all the more horrible because they are mean horrible deeds. They would disgrace, and I am certain they would outrage, the feelings of savages. Yet disclosures like these prove that they are of common occurrence in this city, and that they are carried on for the few shillings filched from the burial fees. To escape these one undertaker crams the dead infants into a coffin with an adult, placing a ghastly cordon around the dead pauper; to escape them another flings them into a deal box filled with quicklime. Will no member of Parliament; or, better still, will no member of the Government, step in to stop this great social outrage? The name of the undertaker in the present case is Mummy. Naturally, his house was much observed of the public.
He has made a statement. He says that "the skeletons" were put on one side and forgotten! Imagine forgetting, not one skeleton in the cupboard, but half a dozen of them! At present Mr. Mummy is at large, and, strange to say, the populace do not seem to have taken his case into consideration beyond the fact I have mentioned—namely, that they crowd round his domestic cemetery and stare at the handsome gilt miniature in his window.

President Hayes and his wife, who are now making a tour of Pennsylvania, came near losing their lives at Pittsburg the other day, owing to the stupidity or careles-ness of a man who had charge of a cannon from which a salute was being fired. The gunner pointed his artillery toward the incoming train, which shattered the glass in the windows of the Presidential car and sent the wad from the gun close by the President's head.
