Eastern Canada Premiere of "Goodbye Mr. Chips" At
The Prince Edward Theatre

2,000 ENGLISH BOYS IN SPECTACULAR CAST

"Goodbye, Mr. Chips," long-awaited picturization of James Hilton's best-selling novel, glorifying the school teachers of the world had its Eastern Canada premiere at the Prince Edward Theatre yesterday opening for three days only. Based on one of the most widely read novels of modern times, the picture, filmed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in England, brings to the screen in the little role Robert Donat, who scored one of the outstanding hits of years in "The Citadel," and Greer Garson, beautiful New British actress, recently signed by the studio Sam Wood, who filmed "Navy Blue and Gold" and "Lord Jerry," directed.

The story shows, through the eyes of a schoolmaster, the poignant of adolescence in a great school. Mr. Chipping, affectionately known as "Chips," becomes a teacher at an English public school as a young man and remains there the rest of his life. He meets and marries a beautiful girl whose death casts an aura of great kindness toward his fellowman about him. He becomes a tradition. Great men's destinies are shaped by him. Donat plays various ages from the twenties to past eighty in the dramatic story. Football and cricket in noted England schools provide action. The rescue of the heroine on Tyrolean mountain top, a great ball in Vienna and a sensational air raid during the World War are among the dramatic highlights. A complete replica of an English school, situated outside of America, was built at the Denham studios for the production.

Two thousands English school-boys appear in the picture, headed by Terry Kilburn, boy discovery of "Lord Jeff" and "A Christmas Carol."

President Of White Sox

CHICAGO, July 26 (AP)—A banker, undoubtedly a White Sox fan, will be elected president of the famous Chicago club of the American Baseball League. So said E. Brown, president of the First National Bank of Chicago, today.

Control of the White Sox, a $2,000,000 property, for at least eight years was placed in the hands of the bank under the terms of the will of the late Louis J. Comiskey, owner and president of the club.

The power of the bank will be absolute until Comiskey's son, Charles A. Comiskey, 2nd, becomes 21, and after that the bank will control part of the stock until he is 35.

"Our plans are not complete," said Brown, "but the first step will be to select a man to take Mr. Comiskey's place. It is too early to say who he will be, but I can tell you the bank has plenty of good baseball fans, and one of them will get the job."

"Mr. Chips" Hailed
As One of Greatest Film Masterpieces

The Maritime premiere of the great English picture, "Good-bye Mr. Chips" was attended by large and appreciative audiences at the Prince Edward Theatre yesterday. The showing followed a packed day of the first Canadian showing in Montreal, on which occasion Mr. S. Morgan-Powell, literary and dramatic scribe of the Montreal Star, wrote as follows:

"The power of the finest stories in literature are the least dramatic. Those emotions that stir the heart most deeply are not necessarily the most dramatic. James Hilton's charming little book, 'Goodbye, Mr. Chips!' is a case in point. It tells the simple story of a schoolmaster in an English public school, who started his career ingloriously, gaining unpopularity when above all things else he wanted to be popular. His native shyness seemed to stand in his way. But by degrees he came into his life and brought out all the finest qualities in his nature and he ended his career as the beloved Headmaster who looked the best over the years. It is too early to say he had fulfilled his life's dream and his ideal of service.

It is a story that represents the quietness of simplicity in the selling; yet it has gone around the world and has moved tens of thousands of hearts. Now it will move to the screen in a manner that makes Mr. Chips live even more vividly than he does on the printed page. For here you have beautiful acting in a story that breathes the quietness of a universal appeal because it deals with universal things—the relations between a schoolmaster and his boys; the woe that strikes down a young wife and leaves Mr. Chips to face the world alone—alone but for his boys who come to make life worth living to him and who realize in their turn the debt they owe to the master who devoted his life to them.

You will search the entire record of the screen in vain for a film that holds more charm than this one. There are good reasons for this. In the first place, the theme has been handled with a sincerity that has brought into being its true beauty and its vital worth. It is set against an English background and a glorious history that goes back to the boyhood days of Drake. Real schoolboys from real public schools play the boys who passed through Mr. Chip's hands. The atmosphere is genuine from the outset through to the closing scenes. And the story is enacted by a cast that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to have improved upon.

There may be other actors who could have played Mr. Chips, but it is convincing and moving, but if there are do not know of them. Robert Donat, whose remarkable screen career is one of the true romances of the studio, has done something in this picture that will endure. He has given us a study of a character that grows and grows in power and in appeal until it becomes a personality compacted with beauty, truth and inspiration—a figure that will be remembered as long as motion pictures themselves endure. That is high praise but, in my considered opinion, thoroughly well deserved.

In make-up alone it is a triumph. You watch Mr. Chips from his first entry on the scene as a young master tackling his first job down through sixty years of loyal, unselfish and devoted service. You see him age before your very eyes—not in figure and features alone, but in manner, in steadily broadening sympathy and understanding, in everything that is best and most enduring in manhood. Here is the very evocation of the spirit of the English public school, transferred, created by an actor whose creative genius is great and who is destined, unless his way to the top is so short, to be a long, long time, I am afraid, before we see any character lived upon the silver sheet so naturally, so movingly, and so beautifully as Robert Donat lives before us in the person of Mr. Chips.

There are other features that combine to lend to this film its rare distinction and impressiveness. The role of Mrs. Chips is portrayed by a newcomer to the screen—Greer Garson. This beautiful young English actress, who, by the way, is the living image of what Ellen Terry was at twenty-four, in figure, face, voice, and indefinable but potent feminine appeal, has not a very lengthy part to play, but she fills it so gracefully, so naturally, and with such rare simplicity and sympathetic insight that its memory remains with the spectator long after she has passed out of the story.

Space limitations forbid more than passing reference to the numerous vivid and arresting studies of less significant but never insignificant roles; for instance, the magnificent authoritative Headmaster of that true great actor, Lyn Harding—a portrait that is fit its way as notable as his unforgettable twenty VIII was upon the stage; Paul von Henner's sympathetic German master; three clear-cut vignettes—Louise Hampton as the housekeeper for Mr. Chips; Jill Bennett's Helen; and Marjorie Hunt's Victoria; as well as young Terry Kilburn's delightful studies of Peter Colley, J. J. and J. J. and Mrs. MacRae's finely balanced characters.

This picture has all the elements of permanence. It will live; and it deserves to.
