ELECTRIC GLOSS.

FOR cleaning Solid Silver, Nickel, Brass, Copper and Plate Glass. Quick! Sure!
Permanent! No dirt, no trouble, no labor.
Being entirely free from grit and acids, it cannot injure the most finely burnished surface. It is the only preparation ever produced that will polish brass or copper without the use of acid. Nothing approaches it for removing grease, etc.; while for cleaning Nickel or Silver it is especially useful.
Retail price, 25 cents per bottle.
MICA WASH.—This wash is the only thing of the kind ever invented. A stove may be as handsome as a jewel and shine like ebony; but smoked mica lights will spoil it all. Day by day mica becomes scarcer and higher in price, and an article that will clean and preserve it is valuable to all concerned.
Try this wash once, and you will always use it. Retail price, 25 cents per bottle.

CHAPTER III.
AFTER THE PREACHING.

In less than an hour from the time Seth Bede was walking by Dinah's side along the hedgerow-path that skirted the pastures and green cornfields which lay between the village and the Hall Farm, Dinah had taken off her little Quaker bonnet again, and was holding it in her hands that she might have a freer enjoyment of the cool evening twilight, and Seth could see the expression of her face quite clearly as he walked by her side, timidly revolving something he wanted to say to her. It was an expression of unconscious placid gravity—of absorption in thoughts that had no connection with the present moment or with her own personality; an expression that is most of all discouraging to a lover.
Her very walk was discouraging; it had that quiet elasticity that asks for no support. Seth felt this dimly; he said to himself, 'She's too good and holy for any man, let alone me,' and the words he had been submitting rushed back before they had reached his lips. But another thought gave him courage: 'There's no man could love her better, and leave her freer to follow the Lord's work.' They had been silent for many minutes now, since they had done talking about Bessy Cranage; Dinah seemed almost to have forgotten Seth's presence, and her pace was becoming so much quicker, that the sense of their being only a few minutes' walk from the yard-gates of the Hall Farm at last gave Seth courage to speak.
'You've quite made up your mind to go back to Snowfield o' Saturday, Dinah?'

'Yes,' said Dinah, quietly. 'I'm called there. It was borne in upon my mind while I was meditating on Sunday night, as sister Allen, who's in a decline, is in need of me. I saw her as plain as we see that bit of thin white cloud, lifting up her poor thin hand and beckoning to me. And this morning when I opened the Bible for direction, the first words my eyes fell on were, "And after we had seen the vision, immediately we tried to go into Macedonia." If it wasn't for that clear showing of the Lord's will I should be loth to go, for my heart yearns over my aunt and her little ones, and that poor wandering lamb, Hetty Sorrel. I've been much drawn out in prayer for her of late, and I look on it as a token that there may be mercy in store for her.'

'God grant it,' said Seth. 'For I doubt Adam's heart is so set on her, he'll never turn to anybody else; and yet it 'ud go to my heart if he was to marry her, for I cannot think as she'd make him happy. It's a deep mystery—the way the heart of man turns to one woman out of all the rest he's seen i' the world, and makes it easier for him to work seven years for her, like Jacob did for Rachel, sooner than have any other woman for the asking. I often think of them words, "And Jacob served seven years for Rachel; and they seemed to him but a few days for the love he had to her." I know those words 'ud come true with me, Dinah, if so be you'd give me hope as I might win you after seven years was over.
I know you think a husband 'ud be taking up too much o' your thoughts, because St.
Paul says, "She's that's married careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband; and what happen you'll think me over-hold to speak to you about it again, after what you told me o' your mind last Saturday. But I've been thinking it over again by night and by day, and I've prayed not to be blinded by my own desires to think what's only good for me must be good for you too. An it seems to me there's more texts for your marrying than ever you can find against it. For St. Paul says as plain as can be, in another place, "I will that the younger woman marry, bear children, guide the house, give none occasion to the adversary to speak reproachfully; and that, two are better than one;" and that holds good with marriage as well as with other things. For we should be o' one heart and o' one mind, Dinah. We both serve the one master, and are striving after the same gifts; and I'd never be the husband to make a claim on you as could interfere with your doing the work God has fitted you for. I'd make a shift, and fend in and out, and give more liberty—more than you have now, for you've got to get your own living now, and I'm strong enough to work for us both.'

When Seth had once begun to urge his suit, he went on earnestly, and almost hurriedly, lest Dinah should speak some decisive words before he had poured forth all the arguments he had prepared. His cheeks became flushed as he went on, and his mild gray eyes filled with tears, and his voice trembled as he spoke the last sentence. They had reached one of those very narrow passes between two tall stones, which performed the office of a stile in Loamshire, and Dinah paused as she turned toward Seth, and said in her tender but calm treble notes:
'Seth Bede, I thank you for your love toward me, and if I could think any man as more than a Christian brother, I think it would be you. But my heart is not free to marry. That is good for other women, and it is a great and a blessed thing to be a wife and mother; but 'as God has distributed to every man, as the Lord hath called every man, so let him speak.' God has called me to minister to others, not to have any joys or sorrows of my own, but to rejoice with them that do rejoice, and to weep with those that weep. He has called me to speak his word, and He has greatly owned my work. It could only be on a very clear showing that I could leave the brethren and sisters at Snowfield, who are favored with very little of this world's goods; where the trees are few so that a child might count them, and there's very hard living for the poor in the winter. It has been given to me to help, to comfort and strengthen the little flock there, and to call in many wanderers; and my soul is filled with these things from my rising up till my lying down. My life is too short, and God's work is too great for me to think of making a home for myself in this world. I've married a deaf ear to your words, Seth, for when I saw as your love was given to me, I thought it might be a leading of Providence for me to charge my way of life, and that we should be fellow-laborers; and I spread the matter before the Lord. But whenever I tried to fix my heart on marriage, and our living together, other thoughts always came in—the times when I've prayed for the sick and dying, and the happy hours I've had preaching, when my heart was filled with love, and the Word was given to me abundantly. And when I've opened the Bible for direction, I've always lighted on some clear word to tell me where my work lay. I believe what you say, Seth, that you would try to be a help and not a hindrance to my work; but I see that our marriage is not God's will—he draws my heart another way. I desire to live and die with our husband or children. I seem to have no room in my soul for wants and fears of my own, it has pleased God to fill my heart so full with the wants and sufferings of his poor people.'

A Precious Epistle.
Montreal Gazette: During the recent election in B. ace, a remarkable incident occurred which goes to show the character of Rogue politicians. Mr. De Lery, of that county, is a strong Conservative, and was a warm supporter of Mr. Taschereau, the Conservative candidate. He had special charge of the interests of the party in a particular part of the country, and was therefore in a quasi position of trust in respect of it. He is a personal friend of Mr.
Langelier, brother of the member for Megantic, and was formerly member of the Legislative Assembly for the county of Montmorency, and one of the most active of the Liberal leaders in the district of Quebec. Taking advantage of this friendship, the latter wrote to Mr. de Lery on the eve of the election, the following remarkable letter:—
"St. JOSEPH, 30th October, 1884.
"MY DEAR WILLIAM,—Whyte, the Liberal candidate, has been elected by a majority of 45. This is a sign of the times. We are also going to carry Beauce. Why, without appearing to do so, not give us a bit (sans l'equale.) TELL YOUR FRIENDS QUIETLY TO VOTE FOR POIRIER. This is the best way to preserve your popularity. Listen to me for this time. You see that the Federal Government is going to the devil; what is the use of supporting it as you are doing? I depend upon your giving us a helping hand. AR-RANGE WITH DEMERS.
"Yours truly,
(Signed) "CHARLES LANGELIER.
"P.S.—It appears that Theberge and others have proofs of corruption on your part, and they propose to prosecute you for the reality.
WE WILL ARRANGE ALL THIS LATER ON."

We take it that, as in the proverbial case of a lady's letter, the point of the above is in the postscript. It was bad, it was miserably discreditable and dishonorable on the part of Mr. Langelier, to suggest, under the sacred name of friendship, the base betrayal of trust which he proposed to Mr. de Lery; but it was if possible still more infamous to suggest a punishment to be inflicted in the event of that gentleman's failing to listen to the base proposal. Mr.
Langelier may plead that his conduct was not altogether without precedent; that the "speak now" episode in B. ace's career, and the Hart episode in Mr. King's political method. But honest men of all parties can have but one feeling, that of unmitigated disgust at the writer of such a letter as that which we publish above.
Mr. de Lery, unlike the late Mr. Wood, and the present Mr. Hart, treated this suggestion with the indignation which it merited. He remained true to his party and his trust; and he has handed over his temple to the well-merited contempt of honest men of all parties.

The Situation in England.
NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The Tribune's London despatch says: There was a general disposition last week, among the Tories to compromise the dispute between the Lords and Commons over the Franchise Bill. The South Warwickshire election appears to have completely turned the heads even of moderate Tories, and the mildest members of that party made, during the week, the most warlike speeches against the measure.
Saturday's Standard ostentatiously announced that the Tory leaders will parties to no negotiations. The Lords intend to agree to the second reading on Tuesday and then to postpone the measure till the redistribution bill is introduced in the Commons. The Whig peers, the Duke of Argyll, Lord Cowley and others continue their efforts to induce Lord Salisbury to agree to some bargain, but it is believed that their work will be wholly fruitless.
The Times and other moderate daily papers argue daily in favor of an agreement of some sort. Most of the liberal journals and all radicals hail the prospect of a conflict. The Daily News joyfully declares that it sees no signs of an arrangement. It insists that Salisbury is only anxious to prevent a settlement and pronounces the pretensions of the Lords positively monstrous. This journal, usually docile to ministerial hints, seems to be ready to cast in its lot with the majority of the Liberal party, who undoubtedly regard with alarm Mr. Gladstone's persevering attempts to come to terms. Lord Salisbury's decision is expected next week. The Tory leaders will meet on Monday to settle plans. The Tory party will be summoned to assemble at the Carlton on Tuesday to ratify the resolve. The Times' London despatch says that the government seem to expect a dissolution.
