'Bandits' Disappear

Approximately 25 slot machines—popularly known as "one-armed bandits"—have vanished from Charlottetown's social clubs, it was learned Saturday.
The disappearance of the machines is due to a crackdown by city police. Chief C.W. MacArthur said Saturday he was satisfied that not one of the machines was now in operation in any of the city's nine clubs.
The police chief stated that it was illegal to operate such a machine both in the home and in clubs. He warned that if any slot machines are found during planned periodic inspections by police, they will be confiscated and prosecutions will follow.

Free Service Is Available

To encourage a maximum attendance at this week's Red Cross donor clinics being held at the Clover Club in Charlottetown from Monday through Thursday, "Ed's" Taxi Service will provide free rides to the clinic for Charlottetown residents.
This is the third time that the management and drivers of Ed's Taxi service have offered this co-operation to the Red Cross blood donor committee of Charlottetown.
Transportation for the return trip will also be available on request as cars and drivers will be on hand at the clinic to render this service.

Herter Has Reputation For Winning Friends

By LEWIS GULICK
WASHINGTON (AP)— Tall, soft-spoken Christian Archibald Herter has a reputation for winning and keeping friends.
This talent has paid off handsomely in his political career. It will be valuable too when he becomes state secretary, the job President Eisenhower Saturday picked him to fill.
Although Herter is undersecretary for the last 26 months has been the No. 2 man in the state department, he has had little chance to represent the United States at the international conference table.
Until illness forced him to yield that role, John Foster Dulles ran pretty much of a one-man operation.
Things will change fast for Herter now. Already he is committed to attend at least two international sessions—at Paris starting April 27 and at Geneva beginning May 11. Both are expected to require the utmost in diplomatic skill.

HERTER HAS REPUTATION FOR WINNING FRIENDS

BORN IN PARIS
Herter was born 64 years ago in Paris, where he got his early education. Then he was brought to New York at about age 10 and sent to private schools. He graduated from Harvard University with honors in 1915.
Herter first wanted to be an architect, but tales of life abroad caught his imagination as a young man and he enlisted in the U.S. foreign service. When the United States entered the First World War, the youthful diplomat tried to get into the army, but he was turned down. Too tall—six foot, five inches—and too light.
In 1919 Herter went to Germany to help direct the American relief council there. Later he became an assistant to Herbert Hoover when Hoover was commerce secretary.
Meanwhile, Herter took a fling at journalism, as editor of the Independent in Boston 1924-2 and as an associate editor and vice-president of The Sportsman, 1927-37. He also turned a hand at teaching school as a visiting lecturer on government and international relations at Harvard University, 1929-30.
INTO POLITICS
Herter got into Massachusetts politics in 1932. By 1939, he was speaker of the Massachusetts House, a post he kept four years.
In 1942, Herter entered Congress. In 1952 and 1954 Herter was chosen governor of Massachusetts.
Herter was an early backer of Dwight D. Eisenhower for president. And in 1956 he agreed to return to Washington, as state undersecretary.
Meanwhile, Herter had become known for his activities in foreign relations.
The new state secretary likes to go swimming. Another Herter sport is duck hunting.
CAN'T WALK FAR
Shooting ducks does not require a great deal of walking. Herter cannot walk far or stand for a long time without pain. He often supports himself with light-weight crutches.
Herter is reputed to have a tremendous capacity for absorbing and retaining information. He also has a reputation for delegating authority.
Assistants say he avoids trying to dictate a solution to any problem that is being considered. Rather he prefers to get people to work out and talk out their differences.
The HerTERS, married in 1917, have four children. There are a dozen grandchildren.

Militia Has Vital Role In CD, Regiment Members Told

"Instead of decreasing, the importance of the militia is increasing," said Colonel A.W. Rogers, ED, at the annual mess dinner of the 5 Signals Regiment held at the Charlottetown Hotel Saturday evening.
"There are a few officers at National Headquarters who feel the militia is no longer required," said Colonel Rogers. This minority group, he continued, "believe the militia too cumbersome for quick mobilization to take part in a crash program in thermo-nuclear warfare."
The colonel pointed out that in the past year a decided change has been made in civil defence strategy. "Much of the civil defence program," he said, "has been transferred to the army and the militia's role is now a very, very important one."
