Honeymoon in The Bahamas

White gladioli and chrysanthemums formed the setting in the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd, Norfolk, Va., U. S. A., for the marriage of Miss Mary Hildred Hooper, daughter of Mrs. James Parker Hooper, Charlottetown, and the late Colonel Hooper, to Mr. Harry Linwood Whitmer, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Linwood Whitmer, Norfolk, Va. Rev. Norman T. Slater, rector of the church, officiated, and David Fowler, Jr., played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by Lt. Charles Eugene Snyder, Pensacola, Fla., the bride wore a wedding gown of Chantilly rose point lace and tulle over satin, styled with a petal bodice and sheer yoke applied and sparkled with pearls and rhinestones, and long lace sleeves ending in points over the hands. The bouffant tulle skirt, with peplums in tiers of lace, extended into a sweeping train. Her fingertip veil of imported illusion was arranged from a demi-bonnet of lace and tulle accented with tere drop pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of Fleur d'amour and stephanotis.

Mrs. Charles Eugene Snyder, Pensacola, was matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. W. Robert Anderson, Portsmouth, and Mrs. Henry W. Geuz, Norfolk.

For travelling the bride donned a honey beige cashmere and wool suit, matching beaver hat, alligator accessories and a beaver stole. (Photo by R.V. Fischbeck, Norfolk)

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

"I think sometimes it is as though I am weaving at a loom with a spindle of hopes and dreams," a sweet miss in a book we read of late said. "And no matter how lovely the pattern no matter how many gorgeous colors I use—always the centre of it is—yule and red firelight and the man I love—a children and happiness. For me that's the end of all dreaming."

"Just a little house—the be-all and end-all of a fond dream. Maybe, a cot beside a hill" such as this, or others set long Island places, where in goodly measure descends now the peace and quiet of week end.

"Dear me, Ellen, if there's peace and quiet at your place on a Saturday night," a housewife laughed happily one evening. "I'm afraid you wouldn't find it at ours. That's one of the busiest times of my week. Even after the children have been bathed and put in clean clothes and off to bed, what things I have to do—the picking up and putting away. And I'm sure to have something to mend or to finish for Sunday; buttons to sew on, a hem to turn up or let down, a mitten or sock to 'take off'. Indeed, I have to watch to see that I'm not stitching into Sunday!"

"I sometimes wonder then, what my grandmother, if she were living, would think of my actions," she continued. "She always made it a point, if she could, to have most of her work done by early afternoon on Saturday. In that way as she used to say she 'would have time to get into the right spirit for the Sabbath'. And what is the nice way to come to it—full and serene? This hurrying and scurrying of nowadays leaves us in anything but that 'right spirit' for the day ahead. 'No,' she smiled, 'on the surface it's not what I'd call a peaceful quiet night at our house but underneath, well... 'It's a pretty happy home,' we said.

"Well, that's what I try to make it, they say the men build the houses but it's the women build the homes!" she chuckled. "A house is built of bricks and stones, of sills and posts and joists. But a home is built of loving deeds that stand a thousand years; a house though but a humble cot, within its walls my hold."

A home of priceless beauty, rich in love's eternal gold. The men of earth build houses—halls and chambers, roofs and domes—but the women of the earth—God knows!—the women build the homes: "We could not stray from Paradise, for, oh, no matter where 'or gracious presence lit the way, lo! Paradise was there."

Until Monday—Diary—Good-night....

The Oriental Influence Takes Over The Home

The Oriental influence has crept into the home decorating field, just as it has invaded feminine fashions. It appeared here and there in many model displays this season, but in the latest one we visited, it came into full flower.

Floor-hugging chairs and tables and pieces arranged in long, horizontal lines are all part of the new trend. But what we liked most about the new settings was the wonderful use of color. Neutral beige and grays serve as a background for flashes of well-handled brilliant color. Then, too, rare, old, exotic pieces were used in staidly modern rooms to give them full flavor.

CAREFULLY FINISHED

Since modern furniture is designed for right angle groupings, as well as long-line horizontal formations, it is carefully finished. In fact, chests are finished on all four sides. Bookcases, upholstered units and chests of drawers, when tables together, seem to flow into one another and yet they are extremely attractive when used separately.

The units stand on steel tubing finished in off-white, while the wood is mahogany, in both a dark finish and a lighter honey color. One attractive room was a study in gray. Dark gray silky paper was used for the walls and pale gray for the carpeting. Upholstered pieces were in two woven gray fabrics, one of them shot with silver threads. Curtains were of sheer gray silk. The textures were all so varied and offered so much contrast, that any monotony because of the color was definitely dispelled.

MILLVIEW W. I.

The Jan. meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of our president, Mrs. Jean Drake, Wednesday evening Jan. 4th, with eleven members and two visitors present. The meeting opened with Institute ode and the Mary Stewart Collect repeated in unison. Roll call answered by a guessing game and $1.35 was realized.

Minutes read, approved and signed, and monthly financial statement was given by secretary. Reports of sick and school committees were heard and bills were presented and paid. A short discussion took place on providing prizes for pupils at school closing, the question was left undecided at present.

Due to lack of room, plans for building cabinet to enclose piano in the school had to be cancelled, and it was decided to make cloth cover and screen back for piano. Collection amounted to 75 cents.

Mrs. Lorne Drake invited members to her home for next meeting, roll call to be answered by say or pay valentine verse. "Contest" answered by six members and prize drawn by Mrs. Joseph Smith. Lunch was served by hostess, assisted by her mother-in-law, Mrs. Albert Drake, and meeting was moved adjourned.

Designer's Dilemma

This sports-wear ensemble has been called a Designer's Dilemma because Sam Ferber of Montreal has combined just about everything in one garment that can be in anything but that 'right spirit' for the day ahead. "No," she smiled, "on the surface it's not what I'd call a peaceful quiet night at our house but underneath, well... 'It's a pretty happy home,' we said.

Words Of The Wise

Somewhere among the youth of today are minds capable of discovering ways to world peace, ways to deeper and more fulfilling lives, ways to new appreciations of beauty in art or literature or music, just as there have been minds capable of splitting the atom. Ours is the task of breaking the thought barrier which keeps our young people from realizing their creative potentiality.
