Seeding Behind Schedule At Farm

Seeding operations are far behind the scheduled schedule at the Experimental Farm due to the extremely wet weather prevailing recently and it is not known just when they will be started.

In the meantime work has been started on the building of two new large brooder houses for the poultry division. They are planned to hold a large flock as the Farm officials expect to have at least 3,000 chickens in cage this summer. The new brooder houses will be conveniently placed in relation to those now existing.

At the same time work is being engaged in building an extension to the "Old Barn" to make it available for the accommodation of new projects now in the planning stage. Just exactly what projects will be housed in the extension has not been determined as yet as it will depend on which of the experiments will best fit in when the extension is completed.

Expect New Premier To Take Over Next Week

Although no definite information has been issued as yet, it is believed that Senator J. Walter Jones will present his resignation as Premier to Administrator Mr. Justice Mark R. MacGuigan on Monday of next week.

Matheson, Minister of Health and Welfare, as the man in the Government able to command a majority and form a new government. Mr. Matheson was elected to head the Liberal Party in the Legislature at a caucus of Legislators earlier this week. However, no word has been received regarding the names of the men who will be in the expected new cabinet, nor is it known when the new party leader will be prepared to present a slate to the Administrator. But this, too, may be done Monday.
