

Thrashing a Prince.

One day a young recruit was standing guard before the door of the entrance to Peter the Great's private chambers in the palace of St. Petersburg. He had received orders to admit no one. As he was passing slowly up and down before the door, Prince Mentchikoff, the favorite minister of the Czar, approached, attempting to enter. He was stopped by the recruit. The prince, who had the fullest liberty of calling on his master at any time, sought to push the guard and pass him, but the young man would not move, but ordered his highness to step back.

"You fool," shouted the prince, don't you know me?"

The recruit smiled and said,—"Very well, your highness; but orders are peremptory to let nobody pass."

The prince, exasperated at the fellow's impudence, struck him a blow in the face with his riding whip.

"Strike away, your highness," said the soldier, "but I cannot let you in."

Peter in the room hearing the noise outside, opened the door and inquired what it meant, and the prince told him. The Czar was amused, but said nothing at the time. In the evening, however, he sent for the prince and the soldier. As they came in together, Peter gave his own case to the soldier, saying,—"That man struck you in the morning; now, you must return the blow to that fellow with my stick."

The prince was amazed.

"Your majesty," he said, "this common soldier to strike me?"

"I make him a captain," said Peter.

"But I'm an officer of your Majesty's household," objected the prince.

"I make him a colonel of my Life Guards, and an officer of the household," said Peter.

"My rank, your Majesty knows, is that of general," protested Mentchikoff.

"Then I make him a general, so that the beating you get may come from a man of your rank."

The prince got a sound thrashing in the presence of the Czar, and the recruit was next day commissioned a general with the title of Count Orloff, and was the founder of a powerful family, whose descendants are still high in the Imperial service of Russia.

The Great French Remedy, Dr. LeDuc's Periodical Pills.

For the cure of Leucorrhoea or White's Emission or painful Menstruation, Green Sickness, Falling of the Womb, Catarrh of the Uterus or Vagina, Hysteria, pain in the Back, or Piles, or for the purpose of increasing and giving tone to the Generative Organs, two pills should be taken twice daily, or in very enfeebled conditions, one pill three times a day. To effect cures in chronic cases it will be necessary to continue the use of the remedy for some months. A remedial trial will create sufficient confidence in the remedy to insure its being taken until a permanent cure is effected.
