Baseball Bats In SIU Cellar Are Described

By ARCH MACKENZIE
OTTAWA (CP) — About 50 baseball bats and a number of two- and four-inch hammers were kept in the basement of the Seafarers International Union of Canada, a witness told the federal ship-plant inspectors.

"Was there any baseball played?" asked Mr. Justice T. Norris of British Columbia, conducting the inquiry into labor strife on the Great Lakes.

No reply. President Richard Greaves of the National Association of Marine Engineers, whose complaints of railing by the SIU led to the 1960 expulsion of the union from the Canadian Labor Congress.

Mr. Greaves was a day-long witness who described his observations during a period of chicanery with SIU president Hal Banks, extending from late 1955 to about June, 1958.

One of the main points in his testimony:

"The SIU would 'hard-time' certain vessels, either because of bad feeling for the company or for a certain officer. This was done by calling 'prayer meetings,' Mr. Greaves said.

"The expression had been coined by Mr. Banks and simply meant calling the crew off to a 'prayer meeting' just when the vessel was to load.

"The crew would go down to the SIU hall to delay operations. Mr. Banks said the term 'prayer meeting' originated from the fact that Quebec was a religious province and it looked better if it was said that the crew was going to pray.

"I suppose there was not the same influence in the ungenerous provinces of Ontario or British Columbia," observed Mr. Justice Morris. Mr. Greaves said the term began general use in the province when the SIU wanted to delay a ship.

Miss Riley reported on her work conference attended, leadership workshops, television interviews, and the highlight of the year was the publication of the P. E. I. teacher's magazine.

SALARY SCALE

Miss Riley emphasized in her address that the salary scale paid to the districts by the government was only 75 per cent of the full scale accepted by the federation for teachers and that the districts should pay the other 25 per cent.

Merrill Callaghan, supervisor, spoke about attendance reports, grade eight exams and about matters of general administration.

Deputy Education Minister Malcolm MacKenzie discussed new text books which are now in use and others that will be brought in next year. He also pointed out the great need for libraries and music schools.

Big Wheel In Gambling Denies Fixes

TORONTO (CP) — Vincent Feeley, long pictured as Ontario's master of the police and political fix, has denied that he ever bought protection from a law officer or sold it to a lawbreaker.

The gambling racket admitted to the Ontario royal commission on crime that he got a cut from various gambling operations but declared vehemently:

"I have never given five cents, or any money, to any police officer, to any politician."

"Never in my life have I received money for tips of any kind," added Feeley, whose partnership with gambler Joseph McDermost has been portrayed before the commission as a combine wholesaling protection over much of Ontario.

The blacky gambling boss, who at the moment awaits the outcome of an appeal from a conviction and 18-month sentence for conspiring to obtain gambling information from police, denied a long series of allegations thrown at him from earlier commission evidence and from information in the hands of the commission.

A vote of thanks was extended to P. E. I. on an international study visit. Miss S. Boates, related the places she visited and people she met during her trip.

A vote of thanks was extended to teachers of O'Leary public school, Alden Weeks, James Curran and all other teachers for the fine showing made by Miss Boates in the grade eight examinations. Thanks was also extended Miss Boates for her address.

Quebec Power Expropriation Costs Unknown

MONTREAL (CP) — How much would it cost to expropriate the 11 privately owned power companies named by Quebec Premier Lesage in his announcement of a Nov. 14 provincial election on the issue?

Premier Lesage estimated the cost at $600,000,000 when he made the announcement Wednesday. He added the terms would be subject to final settlement by the courts and would include the interests of the shareholders and taxpayers.

The group of companies had total assets of more than $600,000,000 at the end of 1961, a survey showed Thursday.

They served more than 675,000 customers in 1961 and had net profit—after deducting income taxes, interest payments on loans and depreciation—of about $23,000,000.

In contrast, the Crown-owned Quebec Hydro-Electric Commission, which would absorb the private companies in the event of expropriation, had total assets of $1,214,000,000 at the end of 1961, but only 594,000 customers.

Quebec Hydro issues no profit figure as earnings are ploughed back into capital expenditures.

Quebec Hydro now has an outstanding funded debt of $722,000,000. This would be swelled to more than $1,100,000,000 if Premier Lesage's plan of raising $250,000,000 in loans were carried out in event of take-over.
