Previous to his departure for British Columbia, Dr. MacSwain was waited on and presented with the following
ADDRESS.
ELDON, Belfast, April 3, 1884.
TO ANGUS MACSWAIN, ESQUIRE, M. D.,
L. R. C. P., London, G. B.

DEAR SIR,—It is with feelings of most sincere regret that we have learned of your determination to remove from Prince Edward Island, and seek a home in a milder climate.
To most of us you have been well known from your childhood, as a friend and companion, and our relations have been endeared by that unaffected kindness of heart which has found expression in your every-day life amongst us. To all of us you are known for the last ten years as the skillful, trusted, self-denying friend and adviser in the hours of sickness and of trial. Your devotion to duty at all times, even at the risk of your own life, is deeply appreciated by the people of Belfast, and will, wherever your lot may be cast, ever keep your memory green in our hearts.

That you and your amiable partner and family may ever enjoy long life and happiness is the earnest prayers of
Your sincere friends,
Rev. A. S. Stewart, James Nicholson, M. L. C.; D. A. McLeod, Andrew G. Smith, Capt. John Nicholson, Angus McDougall, John McTavish, Samuel McWilliams, Capt. Roderick Cameron, Michael McLeod, Capt. Irish Home Rule.
The Marquis of Lorne, says the New York World, is treading in his father's footsteps as a sensational doctrinaire. He has come out as an advocate of Irish home rule, with a brand-new panacea for Irish discontent. He has elaborated it in a long article just published in the April number of the Contemporary Review. Ireland, he says, is clamoring for a parliament of her own, but at the same time the English statesmen deem it intolerable that the imperial sway of England should be removed from one of her fairest possessions, or that the vast interests of Englishmen should be left to the mercy of an independent and perhaps hostile legislature. He, therefore, proposes as a compromise what he calls "Provincial home rule in Ireland." He would have four Provincial diets, that of Leinster to sit at Dublin; of Munster, at Cork; of Ulster, at Belfast, and of Connaught, at Galway. These diets should each consist of an upper house or senate, and a popular branch or chamber of deputies. The term of service in the upper house he would establish at six years, one-third of the members being elected every two years, while all the members of the lower house should be elected biennially; all the members of both houses to be elected by popular ballot, subject to the same regulations and the same qualifications for electors as now prevail for parliament. The powers and duties of these diets the Marquis would have confined strictly to local purposes, such as the imposition and collection of the poor rates, school taxes and assessments for local public improvements and the maintenance of public order within the provincial limits. He would have undisturbed the administrative machinery of the Island, comprising the lord lieutenant, the county lieutenants and all other crown officials, and would leave to the Imperial Parliament the levying of the Queen tax and the enactment of all general laws for the government of the island as at present. The Marquis argues that the Irishmen's pride in their local assemblies would supplant their desire for a central parliament at Dublin; that their taste for electioneering and for enjoying the power of the ballot would be amply gratified by the frequent elections provided, and that those functions of government of which they see and feel the results most directly, being exercised by their own representatives, they would have the feeling of governing themselves, while in regard to all things vital to English or imperial interests matters would remain as they are at present.

The Judgment against the Pope.
In connection with the report that the Pope intended to quit Rome, it is mentioned that an inventory of the contents of the vatican was recently made and a copy handed to the ambassadors from all the powers. The London Times' Rome correspondent says: "When the question in regard to the property of the vatican was raised the Queen intimated to the Pope that if the organ of the vatican refrained from attacking the king, the utmost would be done to obtain a favorable decision from the court. The Pope agreed. The king informed the premier, Depretis, of the compact, and the latter approved of it. The Pope now thinks he has been trifled with, as the premier inspired the judgment of the court. In view of the sensation which the judgment produced it was now sought to discover an informality in the decision in order to quash it and thus redeem the Queen and King's promise. The Italian Government has received strong notes on the subject from most of the powers, especially from Germany and France.
VITALITY, exhausted by overwork or disease, is surely restored by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. [a7 1w wky

Departure of Dr. Beers from Alberton.
The evening previous to the departure of Dr. Beers from Alberton, as a mark of respect a supper was given him by his friends in that village. The supper was prepared by Mrs. Wisner, and was highly creditable to that lady's cuisine. About twenty gentlemen sat down to the table. W. B. Dyer, Esq., acted as chairman, and John P. Brennan, Esq., as vice. After ample justice had been done to the good things provided by the hostess, an address, numerously signed by the residents of Alberton and adjacent districts was presented to the Doctor, to which a suitable reply was made. The remaining part of the evening was spent in proposing and replying to toasts, singing, &c. Speeches were made by the chairman, the vice, Messrs. Hunter, Montgomery, Arbuckle, White, Hockin and others. All the speakers in feeling tones alluded to the Doctor's departure; and, whilst expressing regret that he should see fit to remove to another field of practice, wished him all success in his new home. About 12 o'clock the company broke up, all feeling that they had passed a very enjoyable evening, a feeling marred only by the thought that they were called upon to bid adieu to one for whom they entertained the highest respect. The following is the
ADDRESS:
TO A. H. BEERS, ESQ., M. D.
DEAR SIR,—It was with feelings of regret that we learned of your intention to remove to another sphere of labor, and we cannot allow you to depart without an expression of our confidence in you as a medical man. During a residence of seven years in this locality we have had many opportunities of judging your professional skill in dealing with difficult and complicated cases of disease. The successful results attending your treatment and the extensive practice you have been receiving are the best evidence of your skill.

By your removal we consider this section of the Island will suffer a loss not easily repaired. In your new field of labor we confidently believe that the well earned reputation you have acquired in Alberton and adjoining districts will be more than fully sustained.
Be kind enough to convey to your estimable lady our best wishes for her health and prosperity in her new home.

We remain, Dear Sir,

GENTLEMEN,—I am highly gratified with the address just presented; during my residence in Alberton I have always found the people well disposed toward me. The respect and favor which I have received from all classes in the community whilst engaged in the practice of my profession will not soon be forgotten. I thank you for this marked expression of your kindness and good will to Mrs. Beers and myself, as conveyed in your address presented to me on the eve of my departure from your midst.
I remain, Dear Gentlemen,
